Bennett Promises Local Rally:

Late Night Ferry Will Get Trial Now

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

A late night ferry will be launched on a service between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen on a trial basis before the Aug. 30 provincial election, Premier Bennett told an overflow crowd of 850 to 900 at Victoria high school Tuesday.

The premier made the announcement during a 39-minute address in which he came under constant attack from a small army of hecklers.

Smiling broadly and gesturing with both hands, he appeared to welcome the shouts of the hecklers at first and provided some telling punch lines of his own. But later, his trademark smile shrank and his replies lost much of their edge.

When it was all over he was escorted quickly through a heavy rain by public relations man Bill Clancey and others to a waiting limousine, where he declined to answer questions from reporters about the ferry service.

Bennett asked the reporters to see him today.

"He was soaking wet," said Clancey of the premier, who was perspiring after his address on behalf of Social Credit candidates in the Greater Victoria ridings. "We didn't want him getting cold in that rain."

During his speech, which also drew noisy bursts of approval from his supporters, Bennett offered a piece of cheery news for old-age pensioners.

Referring to his Kelowna Charter, he said the increase to the pension supplement would bring the pension and supplements to "considerably more" than $200 a month. He offered no definite figure.

He said it was obvious 99 per cent of the people at the meeting were friends and 1 per cent, enemies.

Convicts Capture Airport, Jetliner

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Heavily-armed leftist guerrillas and escaped convicts seized a small Argentine airport Tuesday night and 10 of them hijacked a jetliner to this Chilean capital, police reported.

The hijackers took over the plane at Trelew, a small city in south central Argentina. After stopping for fuel at Puerto Montt just across the Chilean border, they ordered the pilot to Santiago, where the plane landed shortly after 8 p.m. PDT. It carried 90 passengers and six crew members.

One person was shot dead and several persons were wounded in a breakout from Rawson penal colony near Trelew that preceded the hijacking.

Troops and police surrounded the Trelew airport terminal, where 19 terrorists and convicts were reported holding eight airline employees hostage. The police also

Dockers Move on Small Ports

LONDON (Reuter) — Hundreds of striking dockworkers moved out of London Tuesday to reinforce picket lines at small ports which have been defying the 19-day-old national stoppage.

The dockers set off in busloads in the early-morning hours, their destinations being kept secret until the last moment.

Two of their main targets turned out to be Colchester and Richborough, both a few hours' drive from London.

The picketing operation was mounted at a time when hopes were rising that the strike, which has closed all the country's major ports and reduced its trade to a trickle, might end this weekend.

The crucial decision will be made today at a docks delegation conference, the only body empowered to order a return to work.

The conference was called by Jack Jones, leader of the Transport and General Workers' Union, after lengthy bargaining with port employers.

The strikers are demanding that registered longshoremen paid at the regular waterfront rate should be hired in the growing number of container packing depots which now perform much of the work that used to be done on the dockside.

Also, they want to stop the smaller ports, like Colchester, taking on non-registered dockers at lower pay rates. These non-registered dockers are defying the strike.

Container firms have been reluctant to replace their own hands with higher priced labor from the docks. But Jones secured from port employers an agreement which he hopes will gain acceptance from the strikers.

SASKATOON (CP) — Rev. Dr. Bruce McLeod of Toronto, who called for a new responsiveness and an end to rigid structure, was elected moderator of the United Church of Canada Tuesday night.

Kissinger and Tho Head for Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and the North Vietnamese he has been meeting with secretly in Paris, Le Duc Tho, are heading for South and North Vietnam respectively.

The White House announced Tuesday that Kissinger is flying to Saigon for two days of talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu on the Vietnam war and negotiations for peace.

In Paris, a spokesman for the Viet Cong peace delegation confirmed that Le Duc Tho will leave Wednesday for Hanoi. He acts as special adviser to the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris.

The spokesman, Ly Van Sau, would make no further comment on Tho's trip but observers in Paris immediately connected it with Kissinger's mission and with the future of Thieu.

B.C. Pension Barrett Plan

Retirement at Age 55 Possible, NDP States

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

CAMPBELL RIVER — NDP leader Dave Barrett announced here Tuesday night an NDP government would introduce a voluntary provincial plan paying benefits based on the profits of investments in new B.C. industry.

● Unions won't go to court—Tory.—Page 17

He told a packed audience of more than 250 in the Legion Hall that the aims of the plan were twofold: to permit B.C. citizens to participate in the development of the province through their own investments and to allow those who wish to retire as early as age 55 to do so.

The proposed B.C. Pension Plan, Barrett said, would be tied to a B.C. Industrial Development Corporation. He said an NDP government would put "tens of millions of dollars" into the corporation initially and would supplement this investment with premiums from the new provincial pension plan.

"The pension plan will be portable within the province enabling participants to carry their contributions from job to job within the province," he said. "And anyone leaving B.C. can withdraw his savings from the plan at prevailing interest rates.

Benefits To Increase

"Furthermore, the pension benefits would increase in relation to the profits made by the industrial development corporation. So the more successful the corporation is, the higher the pension payments will be."

The NDP leader said voluntary participation under the plan would be within set limits of a minimum of 3 per cent and a maximum of 6 per cent of the income of any B.C. resident.

"Why shouldn't someone who feels that way be able to retire comfortable at age 55?" Barrett said. "I know a lot of people who would make darn good hippies at 55 because they have the experience to enjoy it."

"Let the young people go to work and not go on the welfare."

Nicholson Retiring, Successor Sought

British Columbia may have a new lieutenant-governor before many weeks are out.

B.C. government sources indicated to the Colonist Tuesday that Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, 71, will ask Prime Minister Trudeau to name a successor before his normal term runs out.

Nicholson, however, said that he had "no comment" to make on the matter.

Nicholson was appointed to the office in June, 1968 and the custom in Canada has been a term of five years.

Informants say Nicholson will retire for reasons of health and that consultations between Bennett and Trudeau will soon be arranged to consider Nicholson's successor.

In January, Nicholson collapsed at a dinner party at Government House but was released after a short stay in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Go-Ahead for Trans-Alaska Pipeline

No Crumb for Conservationists

WASHINGTON (CP) — A federal judge gave his go-ahead Tuesday to the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline project, acknowledging that the United States supreme court will make the final decision but dismissing all of the legal objections raised by opponents of the $3-billion project.

Judge George Hart, whose district court has been the scene of sporadic legal battles over the pipeline for the last 28 months, gave not a single crumb of comfort to the American and Canadian conservationists in his brief oral judgement.

John Dienelt, one of the lawyers for the pipeline opponents, said they expect to begin the appeal process by next Monday with a motion to the U.S. court of appeal.

Judge Hart declined to issue a temporary order stopping Interior Secretary Rogers Morton from issuing the necessary construction permits until appeals are heard.

Instead, he accepted a pledge from lawyers for the interior department and Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. that "no construction of any kind" will go forward until the appeals are decided. Alyeska also promised to give the conservationists 30 days' notice of any change.

Judge Hart said that since it "can be confidently anticipated that the final decision rests with the supreme court," he would not delay the legal process further by giving detailed findings or reasons for his judgment.

He then announced his decision that:

- The interior department had complied reasonably with all requirements of the U.S. environmental protection law, and
- Various land-use permits awarded to Alyeska for its pipeline are authorized by law.

Both points had been hotly contested by lawyers for the

Anderson Pledges Public Funds To Fight Coast Tanker Route

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public funds would go into the legal battle against a trans-Alaskan oil pipeline and West Coast tanker route if he were to form a provincial government on Aug. 30, British Columbia Liberal leader David Anderson said Tuesday.

At a news conference following his appearance as a witness in a court case in Washington, D.C., regarding the pipeline, Anderson said the provincial government, with the consent of the legislature, could hire lawyers to represent B.C. interests in the suit.

Late Night Ferry To Get Trial

The noisy minority, spread through the main floor of the auditorium and the balcony, threw insults at Bennett and the candidates that spoke before him. Some asked the premier to answer questions, but got nowhere.

Bennett's announcement about the late night ferry service was somewhat expected. The Victoria Chamber of Commerce had been exerting pressure and earlier Tuesday all Greater Victoria Social Credit candidates came out in favor of it.

Bennett said only that he wished to announce there would be a "trial run" of the service and that he hoped it would come about not after the election, but immediately.

Someone in the audience asked if it could be expected before Aug. 30.

"Yes, before the election takes place, my friend," Bennett replied.

He said a four-man committee had been set up to deal with the matter and would meet Thursday.

B.C. Ferries general manager Monty Aldous was named by Bennett as chairman. Members will be Chamber of Commerce President Terry Farmer, who has been in the forefront of the fight for the service, and two unnamed members of the B.C. Ferries professional staff and unlicensed staff.

The late night service has been advocated for some time as a means of meeting the needs of businessmen and people wanting to return to Vancouver Island after attending sporting and cultural events in Vancouver.

Bennett spent much of his time reviewing the accomplishments during the past 20 years of his Social Credit government and forecasting victory in the coming election, along with bigger and better things to come.

The mood had been set ahead of time in true rally fashion as people waved banners and a group of musicians answered requests from the stage, mostly from songs dating back to the First World War years.

At one point — somewhere between My Wild Irish Rose and Won't You Come Home, Bill Bailey — Saanich and the Islands candidate Foster Isherwood, doing a bit of a dance, led a small group of his supporters down one aisle and up another.

Outside, Bennett was greeted by an all-girls' band from Edmonton which a band officer said was "touring B.C. and just happened to be here anyway."

Waldo Skillings, one of two Social Credit candidates for Victoria riding, gave the impression the hecklers had been added by someone.

"Bill Clancey said it only costs $50 to get these cheap hecklers," he told the audience.

As Bennett was talking of government willingness to spend money on the Inner Harbor and describing Victoria as the most beautiful capital city in the world, someone shouted:

"The tower of babble."

Bennett said the other parties couldn't match a meeting of this size and someone else shouted:

"Because the province isn't paying their expenses."

"Will you answer questions Mr. Bennett?" a youth hollered.

"I'll ask you a question," Bennett countered. "Does your mother know you're out?"

Bennett said that despite criticism of the way teachers and doctors were being treated, both groups had much to be thankful for because of the government.

He indicated he wasn't the least bit worried about the efforts of the B.C. Teachers' Federation to defeat the government.

"The teachers are going to vote for us because they never had it so good," he said.

Doctors were being paid out of public funds and it was up to the government to stand guard over such funds, Bennett said.

He accused Teamsters' Union Canadian director Senator Ed Lawson of Tammany Hall politics because Lawson was suggesting a bloc vote from his members against the government.

Bennett called on union members to vote as individuals. He said he was appealing to "working men and all others" to vote Social Credit.

"Vote for yourself in this province and if you vote for yourself in this province you'll vote Social Credit," he said.

British Columbia, he said once again, is the only debt-free province and Social Credit the only true fighters of inflation.

He predicted his party would win back the seats in Peace River and Oak Bay which went Conservative with the defection of Don Marshall and Scott Wallace.

"Could you answer some questions please, Mr. Bennett?" a youth asked once again.

"Yes, you go home please," said Bennett testily.

This was greeted with a round of jeers from both the balcony and main floor.

Bennett went home soon afterward himself, but not before telling the audience that those who thought the last 20 years had been good "haven't seen anything yet."

He also warned that those who wanted to let socialism "in through the back door" had only to cast Liberal and Conservative votes.

ringed the maximum-security Rawson prison.

Trelew's small airport tower and terminal were taken over shortly before the BAC-111 twin jet of Argentina's internal Austral Air Lines landed on a flight from Comodoro Rivadavia to Buenos Aires.

The hijackers, including a woman, swept into the plane brandishing machine-guns, grenades and pistols and ordered it aloft, authorities reported.

Another commercial airliner with a scheduled stop at Trelew was ordered away. A police source said the remaining guerrillas might have been hoping to use it to escape.

Airline spokesmen said the guerrillas identified themselves as members of three major Argentine terrorist bands — the Montoneros, People's Revolutionary Army and Revolutionary Armed Forces.

The Rawson prison colony where scores of suspected terrorist guerrillas are confined, lies about 10 miles from the Trelew airfield in an area of south-central Argentina settled in the last century by Welshmen.

Puerto Montt is a resort, rail terminus and fishing port about 240 miles west of Trelew and 60 miles beyond the Argentine border. It is about 600 miles down the long Chilean coastline from Santiago.

Acupuncture

DR. MARGARET FEASBY has all the necessary credentials to practise medicine, which she does in Toronto. But Dr. Margaret Feasby just doesn't know her Canadians.

She has just returned from a trip to China, where she admitted having her eyes opened re the widespread use of acupuncture for a multitude of healing purposes.

Yet, in a Canadian Press interview, Dr. Feasby ended with a rather curious and certainly, uninformed quote.

SHE SAID she does not think acupuncture should be tried out in this country yet, "because Canadians are not Chinese."

"I think that's because the Chinese have more moral stamina, discipline and stoicism."

Hoo boy that's a crock of unadulterated claptrap!

Dr. Feasby has been living a sheltered life. She has not been keeping an ear to the ground. She has not been listening to the cries of arthritic, stroke, polio and other victims. Western medicine has not affected singificant cures for them, they are turning to anything that offers a smidgen of hope.

AND THEY couldn't care a whit about moral stamina, discipline and stoicism. What Dr. Feasby is suggesting, is that Canadians haven't got the old fashioned guts or stick-to-it attitude needed to take acupuncture treatments. She is out of her depth, she knows not what she runs off about. And I say she is doing a disservice to literally thousands who want acupuncture treatment but are being denied it because of the woolly-thinking of the medical profession.

I first wrote about acupuncture about one year ago after interviewing a Dr. Wu from China. I then wrote about Dr. Leung in Vancouver and since that time, I have been literally swamped with acupuncture inquiry.

I DO NOT have an accurate count, but it works out to about four letters or phone calls per day, which means the total is around the 1,000 mark. That's from the Victoria area. I informed most of them that acupuncture is not practised here on the Island and that they would have to get in touch with Dr. Leung in Vancouver. Many of them did, many of them benefitted from his treatments. Many, unfortunately, could not get appointments because the man is barely able to keep his head above the flood of patients. There are only so many hours in a day and Leung works long hours at his profession.

MORAL STAMINA? Why would Dr. Feasby bring that up? Moral stamina doesn't really enter into it when you consider the fact acupuncture is, to all intents and purposes, painless. Most of the time the patient never feels the needle insertion. At worst it can be a very gentle pin prick.

It doesn't hurt because Dr. Leung is a master of this ancient Chinese art of healing. He is one of the few recognized authorities in North America and is in constant lecture demand south of the border.

HAPPILY, some medical practitioners are bending. Two local physicians contacted me in recent weeks asking for Leung's address in Vancouver so as to refer patients to him. This, you must understand, is a breakthrough of significent proportion.

Last week I had a long distance call from Calgary from a well-known industrialist and sportsman. He suffers from neuraliga and had been advised by a Calgary neurosurgeon to get in touch with me to find out the name of the Vancouver acupuncturist.

SLOWLY the medical mind is at least concerning itself with the Chinese method. At the moment it does not understand why acupuncture has been successful in so many areas of healing, but rather than shut it out because of this lack of knowledge, it is willing to experiment, to learn.

But a Dr. Feasby does nothing to help the situation with her statement that she does not think acupuncture can be adapted for Canadians.

fare or the unemployment roles and vote for Social Credit."

Barrett said priority would be given to such projects as a pollution-free copper smelter and a steel rolling mill for the province.

He added that not only would the plan develop industry but it would also keep insurance money in B.C.

"There are large amounts of money wasting away when it could be used to as capital to buy back our economy," Barrett said. "The money lying dormant in pension plans could be used to help bring jobs and new secondary industry to this province.

"The B.C. pension plan would use the pension money contributed by our own citizens to develop the economy of this province instead of being used by American-based companies as investment capital."

Barrett said the plan would particularly benefit civil servants, teachers, and municipal employees totalling about 100,100 who would have the opportunity to participate in an improved pension plan. The NDP plan would be in addition to the existing Canada Pension Plan.

Barrett predicted the NDP proposal would prove popular among professionals and working people throughout B.C. "This is truly a people's program," he said. "But the only party that will fight for its institutions is the New Democratic Party.

"All we need is the guts and nerve and drive to say we want to own our province. We want these resources for our people and our children. This is what the NDP is all about."

Babies and Hiccups

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible for a child to be born with hiccups? A friend claims that, when she was carrying her first child, she felt it move and it seemed as though the baby was having hiccups.

When the baby was born the doctor was surprised that the baby was crying. As a rule, as you know, the baby does not cry until the doctor spanks it.—X

Your friend may have been right, because infants can have hiccups immediately after birth, and it is known to happen in the uterus before birth.

I can't agree, however, that a baby doesn't cry until spanked. Many of them start breathing normally without any help — that's the purpose of a spank. To give a mild shock that starts the baby breathing. Probably many doctors give that mild spank routinely, but in fact it isn't always necessary. Still, no harm done, either.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was told by my family doctor that I have a prostate condition, and he suggested that I consult a urologist. Before I do, I would like to learn more about this condition. Is there any treatment except surgery? I have no pain, but urine pressure is lower at times. — R.L.J.

My first answer to you is to suggest that you do as your doctor said and see a urologist. If the problem is mild now, why not get it treated while it remains mild?

Yes, there are treatments other than surgery, but the treatment is dictated by the exact type and degree of the trouble.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am two month pregnant. I am on a low sodium diet and I am 30 pounds overweight.

Is there any way I can lose weight and still maintain a balanced nutritional diet and give birth to a normal baby? — L.S.

Your baby needs the same basic diet that you do — vitamins, calcium, iron, and, of course, protein.

For you to get this, there is no need to overeat, but no need to starve yourself, either.

You probably recall the old saying that "now you are eating for two." But remember, the second party is a pretty tiny one and doesn't require that you eat twice as much as normal to support it.

Anyway, if you've put on any sizeable portion of that 30 pounds during your pregnancy, you should be concerned, which your doctor apparently is because that's why you're on that low sodium diet right now.

of the church's 25th general council meeting.

McLeod is a nephew of Rev. Dr. Hugh McLeod, who was moderator of the church from 1960 to 1962, was minister of First United Church in Victoria from 1938 to 1948 and now is retired here.

Runner-up was lawyer John Black of Kingston, Ont., who, if elected, would have been the church's second lay moderator. Third in the balloting was Rev. Clifford Elliott of Toronto, minister of Metropolitan United Church.

First to be eliminated was Rev. Robert Henderson of Vancouver, personnel secretary of the B.C. conference of the church.

McLeod, minister of Bloor Street United Church, was regarded by many members of the council as the most progressive of the candidates. He was described in nominating speeches as an expert in communications, an increasingly vital role for the church.

He told the council prior to his election that the church's top priority is "to be responsive to new needs."

Ex-Patient Charged

Psychiatrist Slain

VANCOUVER (UPI) — A 38-year-old woman psychiatrist was shot dead here after being held at gunpoint for more than an hour by a former patient who then killed himself, police said Tuesday.

Another patient, also held captive with the doctor, was not harmed.

Her assailant, who police identified as Thomas Aubrey Phillips, about 40, was found beside her with a sawed-off .303 rifle nearby.

Phillips is believed to have a wife and a mother living in eastern Canada. He also has a 13-year-old son living here.

Police said the former mental patient went to Chan's office about 6:30 p.m. Monday.

He burst into the office while she was interviewing a woman patient who then attempted to leave, but was told to remain seated by the gunman.

Police said Chan had treated the man at Riverview Mental Hospital before his release last Jan. 7.

The unidentified woman told police she was stepping into the elevator, which held another passenger, when she heard two shots and saw Chan fall.

Jobless Decline Slight

OTTAWA (UPI) — The number of unemployed Canadians declined by 25,000 to 543,000 between June and July, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday. But the slight drop pushed up the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate from 6.2 to 6.3 per cent.

Opposition leaders immediately assailed the figures and demanded a change in government policy and a change in government.

The seasonally adjusted figures include the fluctuating factors in Canada's yearly employment picture.

Regional the unemployment picture looked bad. On a seasonally adjusted basis, unemployment in the Atlantic provinces rose to 9.7 per cent from 9.3 per cent in June. In Quebec it went up to 8.9 per cent from 8.4 per cent. Unemployment in the prairies went up from 3.9 to 4.3 per cent.

British Columbia remained stable at 7.8 per cent, with the labor force increased 45,000 from July, 1971, to July 1972, the employed up 35,000 and the unemployed up 10,000.

Chess Errors Swapped

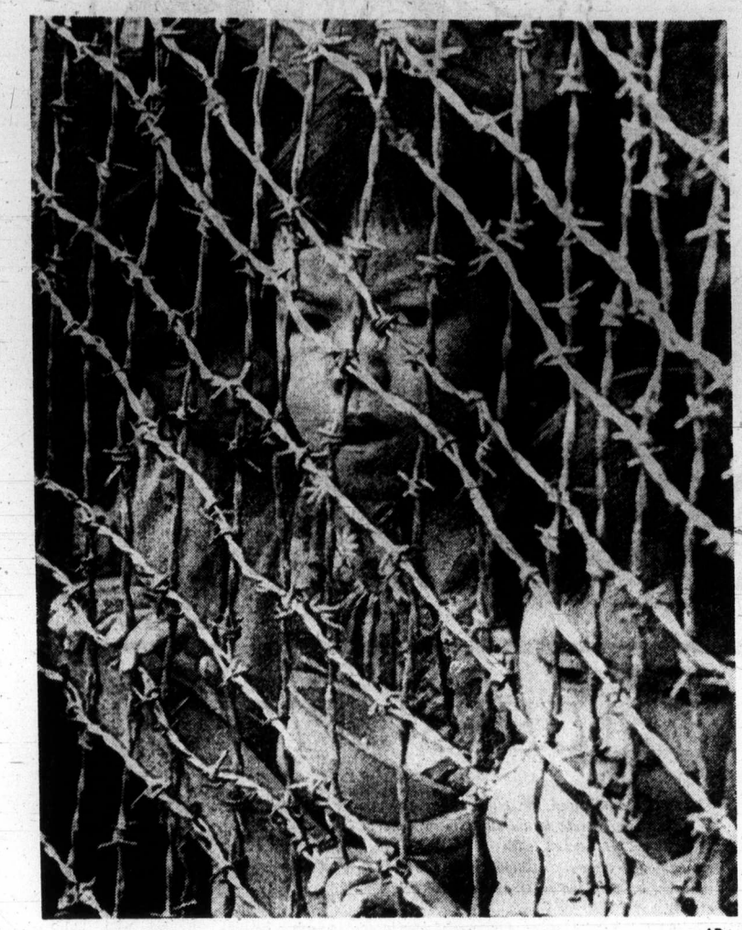

REYKJAVIK (UPI) — Bobby Fischer and Boris Spassky traded blunders Tuesday night in the 14th game of the world chess championship and quickly agreed to a draw after the 40th move.

Fischer, who had been denied advance money for the match and threatened with a million dollar lawsuit, nearly lost the match on an error on the 20th move but laid a simple trap for the Russian world champion who fell for it.

Fischer retained a full three-point lead in the $250,000 match, taking an 8.5 to 5.5 point advantage. The 15th game is scheduled for Thursday.

Both players completed their 39th and 40th moves within seconds. Then Spassky stretched out his hand and Fischer grabbed it, accepting the draw. There was scattered applause from a record 1,800 fans, including the Soviet ambassador and mayor of Reykjavik.

The Common Enemy

EVERYONE IN PUBLIC LIFE puts narcotics addiction high on the list of problems demanding urgent solution. But nobody at any level of government, or for that matter among any of the ambitious people who would like to have office, has offered anything in the way of a formula, anything like a blueprint or tactical plan that could guarantee essential public participation in any effective campaign against the underworld distributors of narcotics. In fact, there is no coherent directive, national or provincial, to further control and discourage the people who trade in such corruption.

In Ottawa, Minister of Health and Welfare John Munro insists narcotics control is a federal responsibility. And, by and large, it is. But Mr. Munro has been kicking the matter around for months, and without once making a serious effort at scoring. True, he appointed the LeDain commission to bring in recommendations, but found them anything but helpful. The proposal that so-called "soft drugs" be legalized was properly rejected. Out of more than two years of procrastination on the issue little has developed except a bigger staff in Mr. Munro's department and a director-general to co-ordinate whatever policy is eventually determined.

Without any proper directive from Mr. Munro, the British Columbia authority — facing the most serious narcotics addiction of any province in Canada — has moved to extend control through treatment centres and by an education program whose effectiveness is suspect. But British Columbia has not attempted, any more than Ottawa, to dig up the roots of this spreading virus.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson is reported as telling a Masonic convention here that good intentions and passive support are not enough to fight crime and drug addiction successfully. Any dimwit knows that without being told. And most are aware of the "moral illness" to which the minister refers and the necessity to combat it.

Mr. Peterson's reference to "lack of parental responsibility" as a cause of decadence and widespread permissiveness, particularly with respect to narcotics, may be justified. Parents, as he says, are to blame for the "lack of positive direction of the family unit."

And shame on them! But the parents are not equipped in nine cases out of ten to confront with any hope of success the sort of dangerous influences to which their children are exposed. The "drug pusher" in the school corridor, the passing of "reefers" in the lunch hour, the surreptitious "mickey" on the shrub-planted corner of the playground — the temptations to this sort of experiment weren't around when mother and dad were in elementary school.

It is not intended to deny the frequent lack of parental control or good example. The problem seems to be just too much for most of them. It is not that they are unwilling, but simply that they are ineffectual. That being the case, the people who are trained in sociology, psychology and the related sciences are going to have to lift the greater part of the burden. And they include the men and women in law enforcement and correction.

Parents and public generally would be willing to participate in any sort of program which would help to protect society against narcotics, and drink and all the crimes inevitably associated with abuses of this order. But without direction and organization they are increasingly helpless.

A political party, or any candidate, who comes up with some practical policy to apply to these general social problems, or any one of them, will find a most receptive public.

It is a familar tactic to induce unity, or a party of a people, to find a common enemy. Canada has a common enemy in the faceless men of organized crime who include among their victims the girls and boys they can make dependent on narcotics. They need to be identified and eradicated. The people would like to do their part. It is up to Mr. Peterson, and men in and seeking public office, to tell them how.

Environmental Projects

ALDERMAN OVE WITT may be aiming at a target beyond reach when he talks of asking the ratepayers of Victoria to approve the borrowing and spending of $15 million in an "environment" budget. But there would be no harm — except in special circumstances — in holding such a referendum in next December's civic elections.

Alderman Witt's idea is to go to the voters with environmental projects which the city cannot finance out of ordinary revenue and has not included in its capital works five-year budgets, such as construction of pedestrian malls, acquisition of waterfront land, provision of more playgrounds and community centres, development of existing parkland and protection of greenbelts. With the money borrowed from time to time over several years as a program progressed, and with a growing civic tax base, the financial burden on the taxpayers should not be unduly heavy.

It may be that Alderman Witt is right in believing that "people are willing to pay for these things," and in any case there would be nothing to lose in the rejection of his proposals in a referendum held in conjunction with the regular elections — nothing except time until another approach could be devised.

The only thing that properly would preclude an "environment referendum" next December would be otherwise competing referendum for more urgent borrowing, such as for the provision of more and better hospital accommodation. There have been occasions when the taxpayers, asked for too much at one time in separate appeals, have rejected everything.

'Open Drawer' Policy in Europe

By DAVID HAWORTH from Brussels

THE revelation by a British member of Parliament, Geoffrey Rhodes, that an attempt to bribe him had been made by an Italian businessman has occasioned nothing more than a shrug in European political and business circles.

Mr. Rhodes said he had been asked to use his influence to get British European Airways and the British Overseas Airways Corporation to switch their custom away from Rome airport to another Italian airport — for a certain consideration.

He rejected the proposal out of hand but, by European lights, there was nothing unexpected or much out of the ordinary in what the Italian had tried to do.

Discussing the problem of "kick-backs" a leading Belgian weekly straight-forwardly admits that what might be an occasion for indignation in Britain would cause hardly more than a "so what" among its own readers.

Doing the right thing for business associates on the continent can amount to more than a bottle of whisky and a Christmas card. This is not to say European business is riddled with unscrupulous opportunists. It is difficult to draw a distinction between "good will" and forms of bribery. All the same, it is as well for the outsider to know that European commercial ethics may differ from those elsewhere, and he should be prepared.

For self-evident reasons, the examples which follow must remain anonymous. But all of them are authentic and happened recently.

The boss of a British subsidiary here is obliged from time to time to give backhanders to valued customers of which the British parent company is aware but is happy to ignore — unless and until scandal should break out. This event is unlikely because what goes on is regarded as normal custom and practice, and no one is going to sneak on a situation of which they may themselves become beneficiaries.

A British businessman with long experience on the continent describes the manoeuvres just before a sale is concluded as "rather like the mating dance of two scorpions." An elaborate ritual is involved with each side decorously getting into position before the final clinch. "One gets signals," he says, "and these increase as the time for signing contracts approaches."

A large company's transport manager has recently turned down flat the selling pitch of a truck hire firm because — he candidly admitted — if he agreed to a deal it would be the end of the free car he received each year from the truck manufacturer from whom he bought his fleet's vehicles.

The purchasing manager of another company always drafts two contracts, one each for rival sellers. Then he calls them for an urgent appointment usually to take place five minutes after his office has closed. It is understood that the shrewd seller will take some "pocket money" along if he is determined to see his own firm's contract signed.

There are other companies, mostly Belgian and Italian, the two countries where such tactics are least frowned upon (although the French are none too scrupulous) where it is a matter of policy for the company to give its employees 50 per cent of any reduction they can achieve on the price of goods bought.

The "open drawer" device is frequent in Europe; the buyer excuses himself from the office just before the contract is to be signed — to fill his pen or whatever — and leaves the front of his desk open. Its contents on his return will determine whether the order is signed — or whether a last-minute hitch develops.

A steel supplier came up against a sharp variation of this not long ago when dealing with an Italian company. He was frankly told that the sale depended on his acquisition of Lot 317 at Sotheby's. He had no idea what the lot was, still less what it would cost him. He had to make a judgment on the spot — and agreed. He later found it has cost him 700 pounds for a rare piece of China.

There is only a difference of degree between this kind of arrangement and one which involves "cadeaux d'affaires" — those splendid presents which arrive unexpectedly. The companies which specialize in supplying this kind of luxury goods and with whom major companies have accounts do a roaring trade.

There are flats and holidays or — in some cases — money paid into the account of a girl friend. The successor to a purchasing director of a large Belgian company who died suddenly of a heart attack found in his predecessor's desk a drawerful of notes. These monies, it turned out, had been contributions to the company "sports club."

It is well known, too, that some engineers — the men who have the final say in highly technical purchases and whose choice is only rubber-stamped by the purchasing officer, are not averse to a "favor." The going rate in Italy at the moment is 2½ per cent of the deal's value.

This kind of activity is not universal in Europe, but it is certainly not uncommon. The methods are not always expensive nor the demands very elevated (often amounting to no more than access to a downtown flat), but they should be reckoned with.

His Eyes Not Dim

CARTOONISTS have a lot of fun depicting Mr. Bennett as an old, old man. Perhaps they should be reminded of the most notable administrator of all time — Moses — who did not commence his great work until he was 80 years old, and continued on the job until his 120th year, when he handed over to Joshua, and it was said of him then, that "his eye was not dim, nor his natural force abated."

I believe that Mr. Bennett has a great many more good years ahead of him, and that B.C. will benefit by them.

Air Charters

It must be very alarming for the travelling public and those people planning overseas vacations to hear and read about stranded charter-flight passengers, cancelled flights, bankruptcies and the questionable practices of some foreign charter flight companies.

This is news; the public should at all times be kept informed by the media; however, I believe it to be equally important and of the utmost priority that the public be also aware that Canada's largest charter airline has never in its 25-year history ever left a passenger stranded anywhere in the world and has been endorsed by the ATC as having set the standard of excellence for the entire industry.

Help

Some months ago an advertisement in our local papers stated that needed help was available for senior citizens—namely gardening, tidying up, and also help in our houses. That was in June and having moved to a duplex in May that had been sadly neglected inside and out, I was very much impressed. We had achieved the inside, and all was ship-shape in that regard. However our extra money was dwindling and I contacted the number advertised to be told that some of the young people would come and look the outside over. Now that was June, and so far no result, but was told by the young lady on the telephone that perhaps we should get the owner to attend to this situation. Then later on another telephone number appeared, and I contacted them, and a very pleasant young man said that someone would come the following week to look things over. We are now into August and so far no results from either of these so-called services for seniors. So in desperation we have attended to all this and hired our own help. Being on the scenic route one feels bound to have the outside looking respectable. I would like to know if other senior citizens have been given the run-around or is the government's $7,600 given to these young people to do a job, just a myth or pure fantasy.

Free Choice

I wish people who criticize Mr. Trudeau as our national leader would stop to think about the system whereby party leaders are chosen. A party convention composed of arbitrarily chosen political enthusiasts, who often lack any experience in business or government, is basically not a suitable body to choose a national leader. A party leader chosen in this manner then becomes virtually irremovable from his position of party head.

The only truly democratic and parliamentary method of choosing the prime minister would be for the House of Commons, after its first meeting, to elect him by secret ballot and by a majority of the votes cast. Each member would vote by writing the name of his choice for the office on a ballot paper. If after two ballots no person is elected, then nominations are closed and at the conclusion of each ballot the candidate receiving the least number of votes is excluded until a candidate is elected. Tie votes would be decided by lot. This is the voting procedure used by the Swiss Parliament.

The Opposition would be unable to determine which member of the majority party would be prime minister if the members of the majority party in the new House of Commons had previously elected their leader in the same manner in a party caucus. If this proposal was adopted in Ottawa, the chief effect would be to ensure that for each Parliament, each party leader was the free choice of the members of his party in the House of Commons and not the choice of some arbitrarily selected party convention held many years before.

German Tanks

Our politicians and military strategists of Bomarc fame could hardly have thought up a greater insult to the memory of Canadians whose bones lie in Flanders fields, than to invite German soldiers to come over here and manoeuvre tanks on the Canadian prairie. When Hitler was preparing to overrun Europe with his Panzer battalions, he apparently had no great difficulty in training them on their native soil. There let them remain!

To Colonel John McRae, who put in the mouths of his fallen comrades the command, "To you from failing hands we throw the torch; be yours to hold it high!" it would have been an appalling thought that such a torch should ever be thrown to a German soldier . . .

Jumpers

Your recent editorial, Signs of Peacock Moult (Aug. 4) should have been entitled "Effects of Bull Frog Bloat." The absurd assumption that municipal officials who jump from the local field into the provincial scene do so because they have gained the respect and "confidence of the voters in the performance of their lesser offices" is a lot of swamp rot.

To begin with, the bulk of our municipal leaders are elected quite often by less than 25 per cent of the people, hardly a representative number. Secondly, most concerned British Columbians would not like to see the province run on a municipal level by a group of politicians with only municipal experience and a leader with virtually no proven governing qualifications. Many municipal candidates are unaware of the broad scope of provincial issues and some are unaware of the their own party policies. At least one local alderman and Conservative candidate failed to get his leader's name straight on a recent radio interview. Finally, what of the few people in the municipality who voted for these individuals and expected them to complete their elected terms?

Perhaps the only advantage municipal government experience has is to inflate the already bloated ego of the municipal politician so that he feels confident croaking about how much more he can do for the people provincially . . .

Russia Upsets European Comrades

By DEV MURARKA from Moscow

IN a long and unsigned article the Russian Communist Party newspaper Pravda has defended the Soviet position on Vietnam and reiterated Soviet support for Hanoi. It claims that recently Soviet aid to North Vietnam has increased, though it does not specify in what way.

Ostensibly the article has been written to applaud the results of a Vietnam solidarity conference of European Communist Parties held in Paris on July 26. In reality the article had become necessary because of strong misgivings expressed by some prominent European parties on the disastrous effect of the Brezhnev-Nixon summit meeting on the Vietnamese political bargaining position.

The article does not mention this opposition. It says that "many" parties praised the Soviet aid to Vietnam and its importance. But the use of the word "many" instead of "all" is a sure indication that not all the parties at the conference were satisfied with the Soviet role.

Moscow sent one of its top-most ideologues to the Paris meeting, Boris Ponomarev, who was elevated to the rank of candidate member of the Politburo towards the end of May, but it is evident that the misgivings remain.

So Pravda reiterates that the Soviet position, as explained to Nixon, has not changed. But the Communist parties in Europe have strongly felt that the quiet acceptance by Peking and Moscow of the American blockade of North Vietnam has merely encouraged the Americans to continue with intensive bombing as well as the blockade.

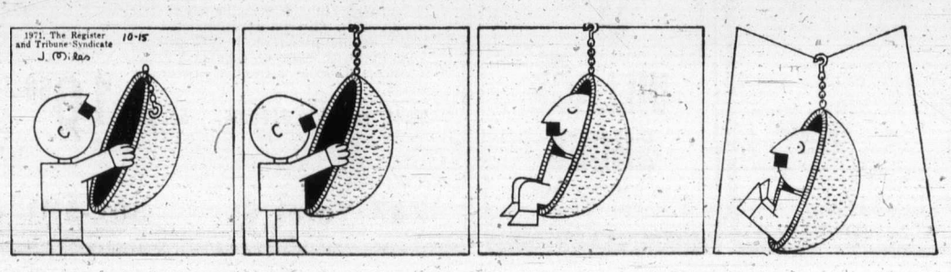

Another reason why many of the European parties are unhappy is because they feel they went out on a limb to whip up anti-American sentiments on Vietnam and now they are stuck with opposition while Moscow wines and dines a succession of American visitors.

A further pointer that Moscow is on the defensive on this question is that while the article quotes from a speech by Le Duc Tho, the Vietnamese adviser to the Paris peace talks, praising the European conference as a new and important stage in the movement for support for Vietnam, and quotes from Nyang Dan, the leading Hanoi daily, in a similar vein, neither Le Duc Tho nor the party daily seems to have praised the Soviet Union.

Thus, a crisis of confidence between Russia and the Communist movement has built up precisely because of the loud hurrahs about the U.S.-Soviet summit emanating from Moscow.

Taken by Surprise by Change in Climate of International Affairs

South Korea Flounders in Sea of Uncertainty

By MARK FRANKLAND
From Tokyo

The rules of small-power diplomacy are quite different from those that guide the great powers.

The big countries are like ocean-going liners which keep steadily to their course in all but the very worse weather; but the small powers are like small sailboats — they have to make what use they can of the wind and seas that come their way.

They cannot defy the elements, but if they are clever they can exploit them to good advantage.

Ever since the Korean war ended, nearly 20 years ago, th South Koreans had followed a number of set navigational principles. They believed their major hazard to be North Korea, backed by its two communist allies, Russia and China.

Japan was another possible hazard; for the moment, it was like a rock safely below the water, but all the same it was to be treated with caution.

South Korea counted on a steady and benign wind from the United States to keep it moving and give it the power to avoid the danger spots.

This was well and good until last year. Then the wind from America started to blow erratically; South Korea, it appeared, might soon face the choice of becoming becalmed — or being driven straight towards the rocks it had spent so many years avoiding.

The South Korean mistake was to suppose that the climate of international affairs does not change. Other small Asian countries that had been happily driven along by the American wind — such as Taiwan and South Vietnam — have wound up in even more difficult poisitions.

The interesting thing about South Korea's case is that it has more room to manoeuvre than did Taiwan or South Vietnam, and there is the chance that good diplomatic seamanship will bring South Korea to safety.

It is hard for the outside world to realize just what a shock the new Nixon foreign policy gave Korea last year. It was far more than a matter of the announcement that President Nixon was going to China.

A foreign policy expert in Seoul gave a list of other shocks; Defence Secretary Melvin Laird's statement that America would not fight another land war in Asia; the American 10 per cent import surcharge and textile quotas, "which were just a shock to Japanese pride and emotions but which really hurt us badly."

Also the fear that America might abandon the Thieu government in South Vietnam; China's entry into the United Nations; the Indo-Pakistan war, seen by Koreans as an ominous example of great-power inability to stop a war; and the American senate debate on foreign aid.

The South Koreans have decided that while America can no longer be counted on to encourage them in their old posture as an anti-communist bastion, they hope, as one of them put it, that "the United States will realize that it has to pay a certain price for stability in Asia."

The South Koreans know they have to keep that price as low as possible and that their best way to do this is to improve their relations with the communist world while following a policy of detente with North Korea.

The most dramatic part of the new South Korean policy is its attempt to improve relations with the north. It is the part which pleases America most; but it is also, the southerners say, the most dangerous.

This is because they are convinced that North Korea has still not given up its hope of uniting the Korean peninsula under communism.

The North Koreans have probably abandoned their idea of uniting Korea by war, one is told in Seoul, "but our aim must be to get them to renounce publicly their commitment to revolution in the peninsula."

The South Koreans look at Taiwan and China and North and South Vietnam and conclude that, in Asia at least, the time when the two halves of a divided country can coexist peacefully has not yet come.

This explains why South Korea's new policy slogan is "detente with deterrence," and why they say if "if the United States or any of our friends (they mean Japan above all) reduces our power to deter, we cannot go on with our policy of detente."

American troops must stay in the south; a reasonable request, they point out, for does not Willy Brandt want the GIs to stay in West Germany to back up his detente with East Germany?

The South Koreans have probably chosen the only workable policy open to them, but they are terribly worried about the difficulties ahead.

At the Korean central intelligence agency (whose chief is one of the masterminds of the new contacts with the north), one hears a somewhat gloomy survey of the disadvantages the south will suffer in the years ahead.

Not the least of which, they say, is that North Korea is likely to be able to improve its relations with America and Japan with greater ease than the south can mend its fences with China and Russia.

There is a very special worry about how Japan is going to behave. The gut Korean feeling is that Japan cannot be relied upon until it stops pursuing just its economic interests and assumes a real international personality.

It was all so much simpler in the days when the wind blew strong and dependable from America.

Even Bureaucrats Welcome His Work

Ombudsman Valued by New Zealand

BY J. C. GRAHAM
From Auckland

Ten years after the office was created, New Zealand's ombudsman is accepted as a valuable feature of national life. But argument continues on whether his powers are wide enough.

The ombudsman investigates complaints by citizens against decisions of government departments for which there is no other form of appeal. In 1968, his duties were extended to cover also the decisions of hospital and education boards.

The flow of complaints has become fairly regular from year to year. Last year 1,135 complaints were lodged, of which 525 were investigated, and 113 found justified in some measure. The proportion found justified, 21 per cent, was the same as the previous year.

The main reason why half the complaints were not investigated was because the ombudsman lacked jurisdiction to investigate in the areas in question.

Almost from the inauguration of the office of ombudsman there have been suggestions that his duties be extended to cover activities of local bodies. But opposition from a majority of the organizations concerned has so far stalled suggestions for new legislation.

Since the start of the office it has been filled by a former lawyer and diplomat, Sir Guy Powles.

He has shown remarkable sympathy, tact and understanding, not only in handling indignant protesters, but also in bringing pressure of persuasion to bear on government departments to make changes.

He has seldom had to use his ultimate weapon of reporting to parliament that a department has refused to accept his findings.

The high quality of his work in the role of ombudsman has been in large part responsible for the repeated suggestions from many quarters that his powers be increased to cover local bodies.

He himself has also proposed such extension.

Local bodies, such as city councils, which oppose use of the ombudsman to investigate complaints claim that such action would amount to intrusion by parliament into local matters. The ombudsman is appointed by, and is answerable to, parliament.

Some local bodies have suggested that they appoint a local ombudsman — so overcoming the objection of interference by parliament.

Lack of unity on the subject has so far deterred the government from forcing the issue, but there are signs that it would like to see the matter more carefully studied.

Advocates of an extension of the ombudsman's role point out that bureaucrats generally opposed the whole idea of an ombudsman when it was first considered, but gradually came around.

★ ★ ★

They have come to find that the office is a protection for them against unjustified allegations just as much as it is a guardian of public rights.

Eager Poles Empty East German Stores

By
HUBERT J. ERB
From Berlin

A Polish buying spree launched westward into East Germany is causing an economic pinch for the Germans.

A counter-wave of East Germans is again streaming into Poland in a mingling of German and Slav that has lasted 1,000 years despite wars, bitterness, shifting governments and boundaries.

Visa requirements have been eased for East Germans wanting to cross the Oder-Neisse frontier or for Poles wanting to come the other way. Berlin is only 50 miles from the present Polish border along the two rivers.

The official East German news agency ADN says 6.4 million persons crossed the rivers in the first six months of this year.

Of these, 3.6 million were Poles bearing zlotys to exchange for East marks for use in East Berlin, Frankfurt on Oder, Goerlitz and other East German places.

A joint commission that planned the easing of travel restrictions had figured on eight million persons crossing borders this year. Now the figure is put at 12 million plus.

The Poles come hunting for bargains in "Western style" goods in an East Germany that is the most advanced economic state within the Soviet bloc.

The East Germans can buy cheaper gasoline and better vodka in Poland, but most of them go looking for places they grew up in or where relatives once lived.

For them, Stettin, Breslau and Danzig raise memories. These cities now bear the names Szczecin, Wroclaw and Gdansk.

The exchange was made possible because the communist regimes were seeking respective safety valves: the East Germans a means of easing the irritation of a population kept walled off from the West, the Poles a way of putting more and better consumer goods within reach of their restless people.

Every day 40 busloads of Poles come to East Berlin. Buyers throng the Centrum department store, a showcase outlet on downtown Alexander Square.

The Poles come loaded with East marks — an estimated $56 million worth in the first six months of this year. Their demands seem insatiable.

A salesgirl in the Centrum asked a Polish girl, "Do you really want them? The cost is 350 marks."

In an East Berlin boutique one Polish woman acquired 34 brassieres.

"Three" the Pole insisted. He got them.

The free-border movement, and another instituted between East Germany and Czechoslovakia to the south, have been praised as actions of "socialist solidarity."

East Germans increasingly have been sinking much of their own money into things of lasting worth, such as antiques, and in Czechoslovakia they have extended this in pursuit of such items as Bohemian glass.

But they also come home with cases of real Pilsner beer, fresh milk and butter. The brew is costly and the dairy products are scarce in East Germany.

Seniors Escape from Madding Crowd

Hideaways Political Perks

By JOHN H. AVERILL From Washington

Except for blueprints of the Poseidon ballistic missile and the Pentagon's war plans, Washington's best kept secret is the Capitol hideaway.

The few congressional leaders and aides who know the location of these quarters refuse to talk. Thus the exact number of hideaways is in itself a secret.

Speculation, combined with a study of Capitol diagrams, suggests there are 54 senate hideaways and two dozen on the House side.

One reason for the great secrecy is because the hideaways are so jealously coveted.

Every member of congress has a suite of offices in the senate or House office building, all of which are several hundred feet from the Capitol via subway car or tunnel.

But it takes seniority or influence to command a private nook in the Capitol where the lucky occupants can escape from his staff, favor-seeking constituents and lobbyists and prying newsmen.

While the quality and size of the hideaway offices vary greatly, it is understood all of them are equipped with desks, telephones, an easy chair or two and carpets.

Once a senator or House member is allotted a hideaway office he can do with it what he pleases.

Some use them strictly for business or as retreats to seek solitude, a luxury on Capitol Hill. Some less obsessed with secrecy actually have invited outsiders into their hideaways for lunch or drinks.

On the House side, hideaways are less plentiful since much of the space is occupied by three powerful committees — appropriations, rules and ways and means. But some senior House committee chairmen are granted Capitol retreats.

One of the most famous of them was that of the late House speaker Sam Rayburn. Although the speaker has a large suite just off the House chamber, Rayburn reserved a hideaway for himself, where at the end of the day he and his friends would gather to sip bourbon and map legislative strategy.

It was in the Rayburn hideaway, dubbed the "board of education," that then vice president Harry S. Truman was located on April 12, 1945, to be notified that Franklin D. Roosevelt had died and that he was now president.

Since many of the hideaways are equipped with refrigerators and sinks they are ideal for a harried legislator who wishes to slip away from the chamber for a quick drink and not risk running into a prohibitionist constituent.

Rumors abound that some hideaways frequently are little more than taxpayer-financed boudoirs for romantic dalliances. But since seniority, invariably accompanied by advancing age, plays a big factor in allocation of the hideaways, such rumors are based more on fancy than fact.

Frequently, even staff members do not know whether their boss has a hideaway, and if they do, they don't know where it is.

The doors of the hideaways are unmarked, except for the room numbers preceded by the letter "S" for senate and "H" for house.

Capitol veterans recall that back in the prohibition era a hideaway was acquired by a bootlegger named Cassidy, who wore a green felt hat and a huge overcoat loaded with clandestine whisky. He used the hideaway as a drop point where congressional customers could slip in for a supply.

Today, as far is known, no outsiders hold a Capitol hideaway. But when it comes to who owns what hideaway and where, the mystery is as big as ever.

Isherwood Lets Fly At Opponents

Saanich and the Islands candidate for the Socreds, Foster Isherwood, attacked Tory candidate Hugh Curtis, in a release saying Curtis was a former long-time Liberal and had been a paid-up member of Action Canada, and now was running as a Conservative.

Isherwood, (a former Liberal and Conservative), said the NDP candidate Eric Sherwood, "has not been in B.C. long enough to fully appreciate the works of the Bennett government and the Liberal candidate is merely a shadow candidate bearing his brother's name."

In a prepared statement, Oak Bay Liberal candidate Mel Couvelier attacked the statements of Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi who, he said, "could be the next premier of B.C."

He said Gaglardi had been quoted as saying "greed is a God-given gift" and that Gaglardi has said he was "born dangerous and would die dangerous."

Couvelier added, "Gaglardi's comments are themselves dangerous. "I see nothing amusing when he wishes to be quoted as saying he was "smiling, just smiling."

□

In a release Tuesday prior to a speech on Saturna Island, NDP candidate Eric Sherwood said he believes the Saanich and the Islands riding should have two regional districts — one for Saanich and one for the Gulf Islands.

Sherwood said and NDP government would establish such a system and also a provincial environmental quality and planning department.

Victoria Liberal candidate Carron Jameson described the government's "greenbelt" policy as "a great hoax" in a statement Monday night.

He said that while one small area had been set aside in Saanich "there is nothing for the citizens of Victoria in this program."

Jameson added that in 20 years of Socred rule less than two miles of Vancouver Island shoreline has had provincial assistance for park development.

Driediger has also threatened to call a meeting of the riding association to dismiss the executive.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 39-year-old man was given a seven-day jail sentence by Judge William Ostler in Victoria Provincial Court Tuesday after he pleaded guilty to obtaining food by fraud and failing to appear in court.

Richard Kendall, no fixed address, received the seven-day term for each of the offences, to be served concurrently.

The June 11 Victoria charge of obtaining food by fraud, court was told, arose from an incident in which Kendall ordered a ham sandwich and beer at the Melrose Cafe, 622 Yates, and declined to pay the $1.20 bill.

Kendall later faced a July 6 Victoria charge of failing to appear in court. Court was told he has a criminal recrod.

Judgment was reserved by Judge F. S. Green until Friday after crown prosecutor Cecil Branson and defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood gave summations on a lengthy trial in which Brian Patton, 21, of 815 MacLeod, Esquimalt, is charged with possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking.

Patton pleaded not guilty to the Victoria charge April 4 and his trial has continued from time to time since late April.

Court was told 87 caps of heroin, which sells for $20 a cap on the street, were transported by Patton from Parksville to Victoria in his car.

Owen-Flood reminded court of evidence by defence witness John Kerr who said he had placed the heroin in Patton's car without the latter's knowledge so the drugs could be safely transported to Victoria. Kerr is currently serving a prison term for another offence.

The lawyer told the judge that the crown had failed to show that the accused had knowledge the heroin was in his car and he had some control over the heroin.

However, Branson pointed to contradictions in evidence by Patton and Kerr. He said the heroin was found in a car owned by the accused and had been under the control of and transported by the accused.

Branson said it is inconceivable that Kerr would hide the heroin in Patton's car without letting Patton know. He said a notebook shows a close association between the two where drugs are concerned.

Five Days After Order

Totem Still Standing

The totem pole in front of the Nootka Court shopping mall on Humboldt was still standing Tuesday, five days after city council ordered it removed "forthwith."

An official of the firm which owns the building said in an interview Tuesday he was still hoping "for some minor miracle" that would permit the company to leave the pole where it is.

So far, his luck has been holding out, said Peter West, spokesman for Diversified Holdings which erected the totem pole in front of its building.

"I have not yet received official notification from city hall ordering us to take it down," West said.

Council ordered the pole's removal because it was standing on the sidewalk which is city-owned property. The firm put it there without council's permission.

Aldermen felt that ignoring the matter would set a precedent. If the totem pole was permitted to stand on city property, there was nothing stopping anyone else from erecting something "less tasteful and artistic" on city land.

City hall officials wouldn't say whether a letter had been sent to the company confirming council's order.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Film producer William Dozier, 64, and his wife, Toronto-born actress Ann Rutherford, 54, have asked for dissolution of their 18-year marriage.

It is his third marriage, her second.

Man Found Marooned

A 42-year-old Saanich man was in fairly good condition, in Royal Jubilee Hospital Tuesday recovering from exposure he suffered while marooned overnight Monday on Chatham Island.

Pacific Rescue Centre officials said Byron Robert Kirkoff, of 2581 Maynard, had endured wind-driven rain and cold during the night on the island's east shore.

Kirkoff's small boat had struck rocks or a log in the water Monday afternoon or evening and the man, who had been sports fishing, was forced to go to the nearest shore.

Crew members aboard a Canadian Coast Guard rubber boat spotted Kirkoff's 12-foot plywood craft on the shore about 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Kirkoff was found unconscious nearby in a makeshift shelter he had built between two logs.

Kirkoff had launched his boat off Cattle Point in Oak Bay Monday afternoon to go fishing. He was reported missing about 10:20 p.m.

Coast Guard cutter Racer and the rubber craft searched for the man overnight.

Officials said part of the propeller on Kirkoff's outboard engine was broken off and the engine, inside the craft, had been torn off the transom.

Kirkoff was taken by the Coast Guard boat to Oak Bay where he was relayed by ambulance to hospital.

New Mining Form Starts in September

A new form for the recording of mineral claims will go into use in B.C. Sept. 1.

Mines Minister Frank Richter said Tuesday the form will be used to record a free miner's claim to mineral rights under the B.C. Mineral Act and it replaces two existing forms.

The new form is expected to reduce the time between the recording of the mineral claim and issuing of the record. This would help speed up production of up-to-date reference maps showing mineral claims, he said.

Spray Protest Helped Wildlife Say Experts

The provincial conservation department says that property owners benefitted wildlife by their recent protests against the spraying of mosquitoes in Coquitlam, a Vancouver suburb.

The aerial spraying of the pesticide malathion was authorized to combat the worst plague of mosquitoes since 1948, but many residents objected and spray plane pilots were told to avoid their property.

The conservation department said in a statement that those property owners helped wildlife "by providing reservoirs of beneficial insect life and non-resistant varieties of the pest."

The department explained that in California, "where the practice of spraying has become universally adopted," mosquitoes have become resistant to all pesticides.

But the department did not disapprove of aerial spraying.

It said it had confidence in the ability of the Fraser Valley mosquito control board to use scientific methods which could include aerial spraying where necessary, "but only following proper definition of the problem and consultation with the provincial inter-departmental pesticide committee."

The department said considerable care must be taken in the use of malathion "because of its possible adverse effects on fish and wildlife."

Medal Given

A first class silver medal for 25 years of service as a commissionaire was presented to Captain Victor Hadland of 1821 Ferndale, Saanich, by Lieut-Governor John Nicholson at Government House Monday.

Commissionaire William Burkitt, of 2064 Penzance, Oak Bay, received a first class silver medal for 20 years of service at the awards presentation.

Awarded first class silver medals for 15 years of service were commissionaires Sydney Coward, Sidney Lamprell, Albert Connolly and Wilfred Lawson, all from Greater Victoria; Sgt. Ernest Kelly, of Nanaimo; and Cpl. Thomas Hall, also from Greater Victoria.

A total of 13 second class bronze medals were presented for 10 years of service, and 41 third class badges were awarded for five years of service.

Pipeline Receives Go-Ahead

conservation groups — including the Canadian Wildlife Federation and British Columbia Liberal Leader David Anderson, the Wilderness Society, Environmental Defence Fund and Friends of the Earth.

With varying amounts of enthusiasm, most of the environmental groups proposed that Alaska's vast resources of oil be shipped instead by pipeline through Canada.

The Canadians in particular raised fears that the B.C. coast would be polluted by spills or accidents as tankers carried the oil from its southern Alaska pipeline terminal to refineries on the U.S. West Coast.

The conservationists argued that the interior department had not adequately considered the alternative of a Canadian pipeline — to parallel a natural gas pipeline expected to be built anyway from Alaska to the U.S. Midwest — and failed to weigh all the environmental dangers of the trans-Alaska project.

The interior department and Alyeska, a consortium of oil companies with reserves in Alaska, replied that they had made exhaustive studies of every aspect of the pipeline and its alternatives and were planning to take unprecedented measures to prevent pollution of land, sea or air.

They rejected the alternative Canadian route for the pipeline on the grounds that it would take longer to build, be more expensive, cross a foreign country outside U.S. jurisdiction, deliver the oil where it was needed less — and a dozen other reasons.

Since Judge Hart first issued a temporary injunction halting the project in April, 1970, hundreds of witnesses and millions of words of testimony and submission have been heaped into the record through public hearings organized by the interior department and the court's own hearings.

The gist of the arguments was presented to Judge Hart in the last day and a half as he heard a plea from the interior department and Alyeska that he lift his old injunction because the law had been complied with. In the end, Judge Hart agreed.

He found that a nine-volume statement issued by Secretary Morton last March "reasonably sets forth" all the information, pro and con, required by law and that Morton had "not acted arbitrarily, unreasonably or capriciously" in deciding last May to issue the necessary permits to Alyeska.

such an important issue is being pushed by private citizens and the Canadian Wildlife Federation, and financed by public subscriptions" he said.

"It's unbelievable that our political system is apparently not capable of responding to a threat such as this with public money and a public drive led by public officials."

Anderson and the Canadian Wildlife Federation contend that the U.S. Interior Department hasn't sufficiently studied the impact on the B.C. coast of spills that may occur if the oil is shipped by tanker from Alaska to the U.S. instead of through a Canadian pipeline.

Anderson said that becoming premier would "immeasurably" improve his stature as an opponent to the pipeline and tanker scheme. He said Premier Bennett, New Democratic Party leader Dave Barrett and Conservative leader Derril Warren are "probably concerned" about the matter but apparently don't know how to go about taking action.

"I imagine they have stayed away from it because getting involved would show that I, perhaps, have been more effective," he said.

He said he doesn't know whether his two-day trip to Washington will hurt his campaign for the Aug. 30 election.

"I hope people will realise I'm working for the interest of the province." He said Interior voters will realise that issues of concern mainly to coastal residents need his attention as much as issues effecting Interior residents.

New York Slips —But Not Far

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market fell off its high perch Tuesday, but not far. Trading activity was fairly active in the morning, less active in the afternoon.

A depressing factor in the day's business was the weakness of automobile stocks, after it became known the Nixon administration was trying to get several major car makers to give up their plans for price increases on 1973 models.

Sellers' Day

TORONTO (CP) — Sellers continued to dominate activity on the Toronto stock market as prices in most major sectors closed lower for the second consecutive session in moderate trading.

One analyst said profit-taking, particularly in issues which have made strong gains during the market's lengthly rally earlier this month, was primarily responsible for the decline.

Texaco Canada was down 1½ to $53, Asbestos Corp. 1½ to $20, Crush International ⅞ to $17⅝, McIntyre ½ to $46 and Seagrams ⅞ to $37¾.

Prices Down

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were down in light trading. Among declines on the Montreal Stock Exchange Asbestos Corp dipped 1½ to $20, Canada Cement Lafarge 1½ to $50, MICC Investments 1 to $32, Crush International 1 to $17¾ and Slater Walker 1 to $12½.

Darkhawk Dives

VANCOUVER — Prices were off in slow trading. Cornat Industries was an active industrial, closing unchanged at $2.30. Darkhawk nosedived 99 cents to $1.11 as 110,800 shares were traded. Among oils, Chapparal rose a penny to .56 and Albany was off 2 cents at .69.

NIXON'S MOVE: ONE YEAR LATER

Special Relationship Gone Forever

A year after President Nixon startled the world with a series of tough trade-restriction measures, the major points of economic dispute between Ottawa and Washington remain unresolved. This story, one of a series of four, examines the differences and the impact of the restrictions on Canada.

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian officials have recovered from their first shell-shock, but one year after Washington launched its economic blitz on the rest of the world, only a temporary truce has been won.

The year since last Aug. 15, when President Nixon began a shakedown of the world economy, has been a watershed in Canada-U.S. relations. It has probably changed permanently what Canadian authorities have regarded for decades as special relationship between Washington and Ottawa.

From nose-to-nose bargaining on the various trade issues that emerged last fall in U.S.-Canada relations, the Canadian strategy now involves piecemeal settlement problem by problem.

Having tried pleading, then stubborn tough talk, and then sweet reason, Ottawa appears trying to return to the genteel diplomacy that traditionally linked the two capitals, Canadian officials say.

Rather than grapple with the whole package of complaints that the U.S. slammed on the bargaining table last fall, Ottawa now is seeking to deal separately with each issue — the auto pact, the defence production sharing agreements and others.

But even if bargaining style reverts to normal, the year sparked bitterness perhaps unequalled in a century of close ties.

Latest commodity trade figures this year show a continuing trend in Canada's favor, but none of the issues dividing the two countries has been resolved.

And the new U.S. D.I.S.C.—domestic international sales corporations — have festered as a new sore on U.S.-Canada relations, providing tax benefits to U.S. firms that could hurt Canadian business and lure subsidiaries in Canada back to the U.S.

Both sides agree that negotiations are not likely to resume until after the presidential election in November.

Trade talks broke down Feb. 9, when Washington dismissed Ottawa's proposed settlement package.

Neither is publicly budging an inch on those issues.

That is despite the guarded satisfaction expressed by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin after his Washington visit July 26 with U.S. Treasury Secretary George Schultz.

The quiet-spoken, professorial Shultz appears more amiable in most Canadian eyes than Texan John Connally, who preceded Shultz in the treasury post and directed the heavy artillery for President Nixon during the assault on the international economic community.

As the U.S.-Canada negotiations bogged down last winter, some frustrated Canadian officials singled out Connally as the bully-boy, an attitude that seemed to change after John Turner succeeded Edgar Benson as finance minister in late January.

It was the tough- minded Connally who took the Nixon measures into the bargaining rooms: the 10-per cent U.S. surcharge on many imports intended to cut the flow of Canadian and other goods into U.S. markets, and the simultaneous pressure on the major trading nations to raise the value of their currencies and reduce their barriers to goods from the U.S.

The measures announced by Nixon last Aug. 15 were aimed at reducing the chronic U.S. deficit in world money transactions while beating both inflation and unemployment at home.

It was the surcharge — which tended to make many Canadian goods more costly in U.S. markets and therefore harder to sell — that most worried the Canadian government initially.

Benson and Pepin flew to Washington Aug. 19 to bid for exemption.

They argued that Canada had already met the U.S. demands. Canada had already floated its dollar June 1, 1970. So the Canadian dollar had already risen in value, reducing a barrier against U.S. imports into Canada.

There was a non-committal response from Connally. On Oct. 10 Chicago Tribune printed what it called a leaked U.S. government memo listing arrangements with Canada that Washington wanted changed.

The list included revision of the 1965 U.S.-Canada auto pact to remove guarantees of Canadian production quotas and Canadian barriers to full free trade, easing of the Canadian customs limit on goods tourists may bring back from the U.S.: and changes in the 1959 U.S.-Canada defence production arrangement that has benefitted Canadian manufacturers more than their U.S. competitors.

In short, the U.S. wanted to redress a trade surplus Canada had been enjoying for a couple of years. But Canada contended that the surplus had only recently swung in Canada's favor, and that it was more than offset by payments to the U.S. of dividends, interest and other costs that result from heavy U.S. investment in Canada.

Despite this package of disputes, Ottawa refused to bargain on them in return for exemption from the surcharge.

As talks on the issues themselves began, the government won parliamentary passage of a bill creating an $80-million fund to aid firms threatened with layoffs by the surcharge.

Studies by Canadian officials showed that the surcharge, if it lasted a year, could cost 90,000 jobs in Canada through lost export business.

As it turned out, the surcharge was lifted in December after the Group of Ten, the biggest Western trading countries, agreed to raise the value of their currencies and the U.S. agreed to devalue its dollar.

The employment support fund paid about $11 million to firms, to save about 22,000 jobs, before it wound up operations in March.

By early December, with officials into negotiations on the irritants that Washington wanted soothed, the Canadian strategy seemed to mellow.

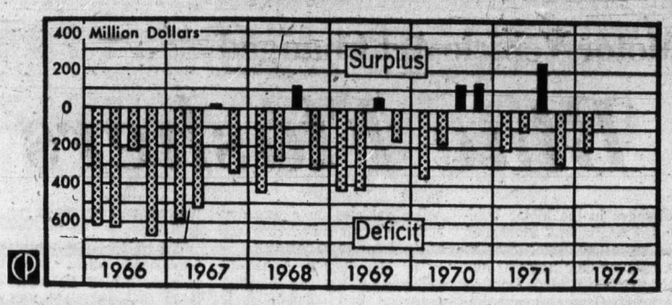

Prime Minister Trudeau went to Washington Dec. 7 to meet President Nixon and emerged reporting "a fantastically new statement" from a U.S. president: the United States had no intention of running a perpetual trade surplus in Canada in order to pay for perpetual U.S. investments here.

Nixon reiterated that pledge in an April speech to the Commons, during a return visit to Ottawa.

Three months after the February breakdown in the trade talks, the government presented its foreign-ownership policy. It is a proposed system whereby the government would institute advance screening of future foreign takeovers and try to negotiate the best arrangement possible for Canada.

Most observers considered it much milder than expected and it was welcomed as such in the United States.

Starting in 1967, there has been at least one quarter each year in which there has been surplus. Result has been declining deficit.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — For a time John Webster Brown thought he would have to give up his part-time business of making cross-hair sights for surveying instruments. His business partner, a poisonous black widow spider, had been devoured by a cricket and replacement seemed impossible to find.

As a result of news stories about the incident, Brown says he has received phone calls from more than 50 persons who have offered spiders or eggs, or both.

MATSQUI (CP) — A major shopping centre to cost between $10 million and $14 million will be built here by Grosvenor International Ltd. The announcement Monday came three days after Marathon Realty Ltd. disclosed its plans to build a similar centre at nearby Abbotsford.

Motor Vehicle Act Changed

Blue Flashers for Police

Changes in the Motor Vehicle Act regulations announced Tuesday allow police cars to use flashing blue lights as distinctive identification.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said police departments are concerned about the way motorists disregard police vehicles on emergency runs or when police cars are at the scene of an accident.

The blue flashing light will not replace the red warning light but will supplement it and police vehicles will still have to show a flashing red light and sound a siren when making an emergency run, he said.

The attorney-general also announced other regulation changes which he said will bring B.C. vehicle equipment requirements into line with Canadian motor vehicle safety standards.

Tail lamps and rear vehicle reflectors may be mounted at a height of 15 inches rather than the 20-inch minimum previously.

Two auxiliary driving lamps are legal now on motor vehicles, making possible the development of better headlamp systems.

Peterson said there had long been concern that vehicles overdrive the visible range of headlights when travelling at high speeds and the change would provide greater safety through better visibility.

Other amendments concern trailer-braking requirements, provide for the use of theft alarms on vehicles and modify the law about use of radial and biased ply tires.

Now there cannot be a mixture of radial and bias ply tires on four-wheeled vehicles.

On vehicles with more than four wheels there can be a mixture, provided all tires on an axle are of the same type.

Peterson also said that recreational vehicles and mobile homes manufactured after Oct. 1 this year and offered for sale in B.C. must comply with the vehicular safety standards of the Canadian Standards Association.

The recreation vehicle and mobile home industry were warned of this change last year and most manufacturers had already complied.

The safety standards demand better braking, hitches, lights, tires and glass on vehicles in the interest of highway safety, Peterson said.

Doctors' Competence Will Be Reviewed

The B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons has set up a committee to study methods that could be used to evaluate the competence of doctors.

Dr. J. A. Hutchison, the college's deputy registrar, said Monday it will take some time for the committee to make its recommendations, which are expected to give the college much wider scope in ascertaining whether a physician is incompetent.

He explained that the B.C. Medical Act gives the college, which is the licencing body, power to suspend a physician on grounds of proven mental disorder or conviction for a criminal offence.

"However, there is an area that is considerably grey," explained Hutchison. "Take the case of a doctor who graduated from medical school in 1922 and vanishes into the boondocks. What guarantee does the public have that the man is still competent?"

The college's committee is investigating methods of evaluating how he has kept up his medical knowledge and skill.

Competence of doctors who practise in hospitals is constantly monitored by hospital administrations and peer review committees. However, as yet there is no method of ascertaining whether his office practice meets current standards.

"Should we sit back and wait for complaints from the public?" said Hutchison.

He explained that evaluating the knowledge and skills of the 3,500 doctors who practice in this province would be a task of great dimensions, not only because of the large absolute number of physicians but also because of the many specialities in which they practice.

There also was the problem of treating each physician equally in such an evaluation. He indicated that some B.C. doctors are so well-qualified and experienced that it could be construed as a slur to even suggest evaluating them.

Apartment Tenants Evacuated

Shop Fire Spread

A fire which started at the rear of Brown's Low Cost Market at 204 Menzies overnight Monday spread to another business and caused smoke damage to a third business, Victoria fire department officials reported.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said the blaze — which resulted in about $3,500 fire and smoke damage — is believed to have been caused by faulty wiring in a refrigeration unit.

Coates said tenants in the Cowper Apartments above the businesses were evacuated. He said there were no injuries and the apartments were not damaged.

The fire, Coates said, went up a wall and into McColl's Meat Market, 208 Menzies. James Bay Pharmacy, 202 Menzies, received smoke damage.

Firefighters got the call about 11:47 p.m. and were at the scene for two hours with three firetrucks.

Workers Staging March On Agreement Delay

Victoria members of the general labor and trades group of the Public Service Alliance of Canada are due to march on the federal government building on Government Street today for a demonstration protesting their long wait for a new collective agreement.

The target is the buildng housing the post office, but no attempt will be made to contact government personnel. Tom Dalzell, regional representative for the PSCA, said the only government officials able to deal with the matter are based in Ottawa.

The demonstration, which will include the carrying of signs, follows one that was staged in Ottawa Aug. 3. Dalzell said he thinks similar steps will be taken in the near future across Canada.

Some 50 members are expected to parade in front of the post office about 5:30 p.m.

The 19,500-member general labor and trades group — there are 700 in Victoria — has been without a contract for nine months. Negotiations with the treasury board have remained deadlocked even with the services of a conciliation officer, Dalzell said.

The trades component is one that has opted for strike action if all else fails, but couldn't do so until after a conciliation board has entered the picture.

This would be the next step, Dalzell said. He said the mood is one that could lead to a strike.

Under terms of the last contract, government laborers are earning $3.24 an hour, compared to the $5.07 earned since May 1 by non-government laborers, Dalzell said. He said government carpenters are earning 40 per cent less than outside carpenters and the gap between government and outside electricians is 30 per cent.

"The last time any of these men got a raise was September, 1970," he said.

Involved locally are maintenance and construction workers, ammunition workers at Rocky Point, heavy equipment operators, transport drivers, heavy duty mechanics and various tradesmen.

Rains Rampant In Stuttgart

STUTTGART, Germany (UPI) — Rainstorms of tropical intensity rages across the towns of Baden-Wuerttemberg and Hesse, flooding thousands of house cellars and killing several persons, police said. A Stuttgart police spokesman said that in Baden-Wuerttemberg, three clerks drowned in their downtown office, and a woman was struck dead on the street by lightning.

Nixon Orders Refugee Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has ordered the state department to provide South Vietnam with $15 million to aid refugees. State department officials said Tuesday South Vietnam needs the additional funds because of a heavy financial burden placed upon its government by the Communist offensive that started Easter week.

THE MOST GLARING GAP in the present range of health services is the total lack of government assistance to elderly citizens requiring NURSING HOME CARE. The acutely ill patient and the patient severely disabled to a permanent degree, receive government coverage at a dollar a day in acute care and extended care hospitals. Elderly persons who recover partially from acute conditions such as strokes require an INTERMEDIATE LEVEL OF CARE IN A NURSING HOME.

SUCH PATIENTS, unless they are on welfare, receive no government assistance and are faced with paying $300 to $600 per month, for care, often in an old building, with minimal standards of nursing care.

WHERE HUSBAND AND WIFE both require care, the costs are rapidly crippling. Inevitably savings are used up and the patient has to seek Social Assistance.

SUCH A CALLOUS INDIFFERENCE BY THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT, is hardly indicative of a government that cares. In "Highlights of 1972 Budget Speech" it is stated, "Thus the Provincial Government intends to inject $266,300,000 additional funds into the British Columbia economy this next fiscal year." Yet not a penny to assist patients in nursing homes, or those in nursing homes who qualify for extended care, but for whom no extended care bed is available.

THE GOVERNMENT is building Special Care Homes to provide intermediate care FOR WELFARE PATIENTS ONLY. Such is the archaic philosophy of the Premier regarding the crying social needs of elderly people — wait until they are bankrupt in a nursing home, then put them on welfare in a Special Care government institution.

A PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT, will introduce a programme of coverage for nursing home care, modelled on the highly successful Alberta programme. Standards of care will be established, non profit organizations will be encouraged to build modern facilities with government financial assistance and existing modern facilities will be acquired, if the owners agree, at fair market value. The operating cost to the patient will be $3.50 per day.

In NURSING HOMES, as in all other facets of care for the elderly in an affluent society, the philosophy of the PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE government will be to provide care of a high quality in an atmosphere WHICH PRESERVES THE DIGNITY AND SELF RESPECT OF THE ELDERLY CITIZEN.

Plane Wreck Uncovered 15 Years Old

FROBISHER BAY, N.W.T. (CP) — A single-engined aircraft reported missing in the Canadian arctic 15 years ago with two men aboard has been found on Baffin Island, RCMP said Tuesday.

The only clue to the passengers' whereabouts was a note found inside the aircraft. It said they were trying to walk to a radar station 75 miles away or to the arctic coast. Newspaper files show the pilot was J. W. Rutherford of Penticton, and his passenger was Dr. Randolph Hall of Toronto.

Ottawa Is Researching

Economy Via Research

TORONTO (CP) — By farming out much more of its federally-funded research and development to private industry, the government expects to reap a sounder Canadian economy and more jobs for Canadians, Science Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

But he warned that the private sector will have to get involved and help dig for research and development projects.

In a news release announcing details of a new policy to direct a greater percentage of federal funds to industry, Mr. Gillespie said "emphasis will be on new or additional mission-oriented research."

"Clearly the onus now is on government departments to place their research and development rather than do it themselves."

The decision represented a fundamental shift in government policy, he said, and also a demonstration of confidence in the private sector's ability to create new products, processes and services — given the right climate.

More industrial-based research and development will create new jobs, he said, and industry will see opportunities for new products and services that it might not otherwise have seen.

The policy, referred to in government circles as the "Make or Buy policy," has created some concern among departmental research areas that there would be cutbacks, but the minister denied this. He promised there would be no firings or layoffs of employees engaged in research and development work.

Acceptance Good but CFL Series Cut in U.S.

TORONTO (CP) — The television agreement under which 20 Canadian Football League games were to be shown live this year on a United States network, terminates tonight—a dozen games short of that objective.

Jake Gaudaur, CFL commissioner, said Ralmar Sports Productions Incorporated, who bought the 1972 rights for $100,000, is exercising its option to buy the 1973 rights for $150,000.

In a statement, Gaudaur gave two reasons for the early termination of the 1972 series:

"The stations . . , have had no difficulty in selling out their available time to local advertisers but the national advertisers had been reluctant to commit to purchasing time before the first game had been aired, to a product that had no track record of viewer interest in the U.S.

"Another important factor in the lack of national advertiser buying was that the network was not completely established until May, by which time most national advertising dollars had already been committed."

Advertising time was allocated on the basis of 14 minutes to the station to sell locally and 10 minutes to Ralmar to sell nationally to offset per-game production and distrubution cost of up to $60,000.

Tonight's game between Edmonton and Saskatchewan will be telecast on Channel 8 starting at 7 p.m.

Gaudaur said discussions were scheduled to start today on a multi-year agreement, but decline to confirm or deny reports that it could be for as long as 10 years.

The eight pre-season and early-season games shown this year went out over more than 100 channels in the U.S. and Gaudaur said he was told that in some areas they drew better than Gunsmoke or Dean Martin.

"Acceptance by the U.S. viewers has been higher than anticipated and in some areas exceptional — as an example, ratings of 10 in Miami and Washington, 14 in New Orleans, eight in Cleveland and seven nationally," he said.

"We had hoped we'd get a rating of about four."

The acceptance, Gaudaur said, "came on what I consider to be sub-average games."

"I'm told it's the speed of the Canadian game that the American audience like. There are no fair catches — something is happening all the time. Our game moves quicker than the National Football League games.

"This has reopened my eyes on how different our games are."

Gaudaur, admitting that $100,000 — and the CFL doesn't lose by the early termination of the series — was "nominal," said the hope was that audience acceptance and a resulting greater market for the future would be established.

The New York Times, in reviewing the first game of the series, the CFL all-star game, commented:

"The opening game was a good one, won in the final seconds by Calgary,

" . . . . Nor is this minor league, bush football."

Leonard Captures CPGA Seniors Championship

Vancouver veteran Stan Leonard lines up a putt, strokes the ball then flashes a grin as the ball dropped in the cup on the 15th hole Tuesday in the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association seniors tournament in Hull. The putt helped Leonard to overtake first-day leader, Pat Fletcher of Montreal, in the 36-hole event and Leonard went on to win the title on the first extra hole. Leonard and Fletcher, both 57, had 36-hole totals of 147.

White Sox Gain Ground Tigers, Yankees Slip

Chicago White Sox increased the pressure Tuesday night while Detroit Tigers and New York Yankees let opportunities slip away.

White Sox, battling Oakland Athletics for the lead in the Western Division of the American League, scored twice in the fourth inning and hung on for a 2-1 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

The victory was the 43rd in 57 home games for Chicago and moved the Sox to within one game of the Athletics, idle Tuesday night.

Mike Andrews opened the Chicago fourth inning with a home run and Richie Allen, who drew a base on balls, stole second and went to third base on an error, scored what proved to be the winning run on Rick Reichardt's single.

BRADLEY STINGY

Tom Bradley hurled a no-hitter for four innings and retired 10 straight batters after Brewers scored their run in the fifth.

In the equally-torrid Eastern Division race, Detroit and New York missed chances to gain on first-place Baltimore, also idle Tuesday.

Detroit battled Minnesota Twins through 12 innings but went down, 7-5, when Jim Nettles and Rod Carew hit run-scoring singles in the top of the 13th.

Tigers had overcome a 0-4 deficit to move ahead 5-4 but Twins tied the score in the ninth inning and went on to the extra-inning victory.

Yankees, one-half game behind Detroit in third place, dropped their second straight decision to Kansas City when the Royals rallied for three runs in the ninth inning and a 7-6 victory.

Lou Piniella's run-scoring single capped the Kansas City rally after Steve Hovely had tied the score with a two-run hit.

The rally wiped out a two-run outburst by New York in the top half of the ninth inning.

Trailing 0-4 from the first inning, Yankees tied the score in the seventh with Felipe Alou's three-run homer the decisive hit.

Royals had taken the lead on Richie Scheinblum's run-scoring single and a three-run homer by Paul Schaal.

Reggie Smith, criticized for indifferent play recently, knocked in all the runs with two homers and rookie John Curtis allowed only three singles in picking up the shutout.

Smith gave Boston a 1-0 lead with a fifth-inning homer then completed the scoring with a two-run blast in the eighth inning.

Curtis had a no-hitter until Texas pitcher Don Stanhouse opened the sixth inning with a broken-bat single.

The lefthander then allowed an eighth-inning single by Don Mason and a two-out single in the ninth by Dick Billings.

Relief Pitchers Shine

Relief pitchers played major roles in games involving the top teams in the Western Division of the National League Tuesday.

Don Gullett of Cincinnati came into the game in the second inning after starter Wayne Simpson injured himself and held Philadelphia to only four hits the rest of the way a sthe Reds posted a 3-0 win over the Phils.

Simpson, who has been bothered with a pulled calf muscle for a week, re-injured the leg in the first inning and was unable to continue.

Reds, who increased their lead over second-place Houston to six-and-one-half games, jumped on starter Wayne Twitchell for a first-inning run and added two more in the fifth. Bobby Tolan drove in two runs with a pair of singles.

Astros meanwhile, dropped a 3-2 decision in 10 innings to Montreal when two Houston relievers failed to stop the Expos.

Marshall, who entered the game in the ninth inning, picked up his 12th victory, tops for National League relievers.

Los Angeles Dodgers kept pace with Cincinnati by edging Pittsburgh Pirates, leaders in the Eastern Division, 8-6, on the help of a two-run homer by Willie Davis.

New York Mets cut the Pirates' lead to nine games with a 5-0 victory over Atlanta Braves.

Jim McAndrew held the Braves to only three hits through the first seven innings before running into trouble in the eighth.

The righthander walked Mike Lum to lead off the inning, then issued a one-out single to Sonny Jackson that put runners on first and third.

Tug McGraw came out of the bullpen to retire the next two batters on pop-ups to end the threat and pitched the ninth inning to record his 17th save of the season.

Rain Douses Drivers' Series

Track-manager Reg Midgley had to call off the $25,000 International Drivers' Challenge series race for supermodifieds when a downpour followed the "B" and "C" dashes. Midgley announced that the program will be held Thursday, weather permitting.

The rich series started Saturday at Spanaway Speedway near Tacoma and ran Sunday at Portland Speedway before hitting the inclement weather in Victoria.

The revised schedule calls for races tonight at Nanaimo Speedway, back to Western on Thursday, to Skagit Speedway in Mt. Vernon on Friday, to Langley Speedway on Saturday and finishing at Olympia-Tenino Speedway on Sunday.

Time trials for tonight's program is slated for 6:30 and racing at 8 p.m.

All results from Tuesday's time trials will stand for Thursday's competition. Fast time was turned in by Roy Smith of Victoria, one of three Vancouver Island drivers. Albert Smith of Victoria and Ray Pottinger of Nanaimo are the other Islanders.

Only 35 points separate the first four drivers in the standings after the first two races. Bill Deschamps of Lakeport, Calif., winner of the opening main event at Spanaway, is the leader with 240 points. George Robertson of Lewiston, Idaho, is five points behind and Ken Hamilton of Ontario, Ore., main-event winner at Portland, is third with 220 points. In fourth place is J. P. Standley of Roseburg, Ore., with 205 points.

The overall points champion, providing he has at least tried to qualify at each of the seven tracks, wins $1,000.

Gates will open at 6 p.m. Thursday at Western Speedway with warmup laps scheduled from 6:30 to 7:30. Racing is expected to start at 8 p.m.

Top 10 drivers after two races:

1. Bill Deschamps, Calif.	240

4. J. P. Standley, Ore.	205

Four Players Could Pass 100-Point Mark Tonight

Coquitlam Adanac sharpshooters John Allen and Kevin Parsons are deadlocked for third place in the scoring race with 98 points and are likely to hit the century mark against Victoria Shamrocks in the 8:30 p.m.game.

Shamrock veteran Ranjit Dillon, who has already surpassed his 1971 total by one, has tallied 15 points in his last four games to take over fourth place with 95 points.

Brian Thompson of Victoria has 92 points, including 52 goals, and trails Allen by two in the goal-scoring department.

Vancouver's Gordie Frederickson has a firm grip on first place with 122 points, including a leading 87 assists, and a 16-point edge over Ivan Thompson of Victoria, second with 106 points.

In the penalties category, Vancouver's Ward Sanderson holds the dubious record of most penalty minutes (204), breaking the record of 161 minutes set by Bill Gray of Victoria in 1968.

Sanderson, who picked up 50 minutes in a brawl at Memorial Arena last week, also has 14 major penalties this year, breaking the previous record of 12 set by John Lamley in 1953 and tied by Dan Cameron in 1970.

Bakers Picked to All Stars

Lynch

Victoria McDonalds, first-year entry in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League, placed two players on the all-star team announced Tuesday.

Centre Jim Lynch, who topped the individual scoring race with 101 points, was named all-star centre as well as rookie-of-the-year in the five-team circuit.

Goalkeeper John Hamilton, the league's top netminder with an 80.4 per cent shots-stopped average, earned the all-star berth and the best goalkeeper award.

The Victoria players were joined on the all-star team by defencemen Taki Vohalis of Burnaby Cablevision and Dave Durante of Richmond Roadrunners and forwards Bob Tasker of Richmond and Walt Weaver of Surrey Salmonbellies.

Brian Tasker of Richmond, voted most valuable player in the league by the five coaches, couldn't find a place on the all-star team but was named to the runner-up squad along with goalkeeper Ted Gernaey of Burnaby, defenceman Jim Insley of Coquitlam J-Hawks and forwards Harvey Olsen of Richmond, Mike Holden and Ian Kennedy, both of Burnaby.

Lions Release Boice, Rankin

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Lions of the Western Football Conference released two players Tuesday and announced the five-day tryout of another.

Import defensive tackle Ross Boice and Canadian flanker Al Rankin, who both played the first three games of the season with the Lions, were cut. Rankin was obtained in a trade with Calgary Stampeders in the off-season. Boice had played one game for the Lions in 1971.

Replacements were not named but are expected to be announced prior to a Thursday home game with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Non-import defensive-back Bob Friend from Simon Fraser University was being given a five-day trial, a club official said.

Alec Merriman

Good news for recreationists is that Crown Zellerbach's Nitinat division plans to relax its access regulations, probably in time for the up-coming shooting season.

The Nitinat gate will be opened during non-operational non-hazardous hours and there will be continuous public access all along the west side of the Nitinat River and to Tuck Lake, weekdays as well as weekends.

CZ proposed a campsite on the Nitinat River, upstream from the bridge, and by next year there will probably be access to Heather Lakt on a foot trail basis. There will be a road access approaching the lake and then a trail along which canoes or punts could be carried.

"We hope to keep it as a wilderness lake," Dick Gillman reported to a Lake Cowichan Combined Fire Organization meeting at Port Renfrew last week.

Arrangements will have to be made with the Nanaimo Lakes division, but Gillman indicated it may soon be possible for recreationists to drive from the Nitinat area at the head of Cowichan Lake all the way through to the Nanaimo Lakes.

Reason for the proposed liberalization of access regulations is that the company has now completed switchover of its truck fleet for driving on the right side of the road instead of the left.

There was more good news from that Port Renfrew meeting, which included fire rangers, recreational officers and logging superintendents from B.C. Forest Products, MacMillan Bloedel, Crown Zellerbach, Pacific Logging, McKenzie Logging, Western Forest Industries of Rayonier and the B.C. Forest Service.

The B.C. Forest Service announced, through Jack Kouwenhovan, that a program to provide small camping and picnic sites in prime stands of forest lands in timber holdings is in high gear with a tenfold increase — to $10,000 — in budget for the Cowichan area this year. The plan is to select desirable recreation stopping areas and to provide access, parking, sanitation facilities and litter barrels with a minimum amount of disturbance to the natural beauties of the area.

In fact, these places in some instances will have so little disturbance that the public may have difficulty finding them. They will be designed for the recreationists who seek to get away from the crowds.

One of the biggest projects, with 10 students already employed, is along the Cowichan River, where access is being provided to Rips Park for a picnic site. This is the northerly end of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club's angler's footpath and gives entry to a large area of river frontage provincial park reserve.

Other sites being developed by the forest service are along the north shore road of Cowichan Lake and include Pine Point, west of Youbou and near the proposed Cottonwood provincial campground, and at Maple Row in the Wardroper Creek area.

"Our intestion is to purposely not identify these sites. We plan to just open up a site, make it available, and then sort of disappear as if we had never been there. They will not be designed for a lot of pressure, but they will have toilet facilities, an access area and litter barrels," Kouwenhoven said.

But, disturbing news also came out of the meeting.

Out of eight fires attended by Flying Tankers this year, three of them were blamed on campfires and they ranged from half an acre to three acres.

There were reports of vandalism and thefts within forest lands, the most serious consisting of theft of blasting powder from powder houses.

RCMP representative Bill Shaw of Sooke advised the company representatives to report every incident.

"If you hear of rowdy gangs heading for your areas don't wait until they get out of hand. Call us right away and we will get manpower into the area," he said.

BCFP recreational officers Bob Salmond and Rick Marell noted there is a new trend in camping this year . . . towards pup tents and lightweight equipment. Last year it was big tents and recreational vehicles, but this year there has been a big jump in backpackers.

But, they explained there are just as many recreational vehicles and many come to the forest areas from far-away places. On the July 1 weekend in the Port Renfrew area 2,400 people in 600 vehicles used campground facilities in the B.C. Forest Products timberlands.

Cowichan forest service ranger Rai Thomas said more public education is required to get recreationists to report fires. Sometimes they assume a fire is slash-burning and don't report it, he noted, and told of one fire that was passed by 1500 people without being reported.

Olympic Strife Rages Anew On Rhodesian Participation

MUNICH (AP) — Three more African countries — Liberia, Ghana and Ethiopia — joined Tanzania, Sierra Leone and Zambia Tuesday by announcing their withdrawal from the Olympics because of plans to allow Rhodesian athletes to compete in the Games, beginning here Aug. 26.

There were reports that the number of boycotting countries would increase. Egypt, Sudan and Nigeria are expected to join the list and possibly Uganda and Guyana.

Despite the announced withdrawals, a spokesman for the Olympic Organizing Committee said no official word of withdrawals had been received in Munich.

And Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, said: "This is politics, pure politics. We are not concerned with politics. All sportsmen will be here.

"We made an agreement a year ago with all the national Olympic committees concerned. Rhodesia was invited, Rhodesia will participate. We think for the moment that the question is settled."

A 44-member Rhodesian team arrived in Munich last week. It included seven black athletes and a black trainer.

The Organization of African Unity is against Rhodesia's participation in the Games, claiming there is sufficient evidence that discrimination in sports exists in the country.

In Lagos, Nigeria's external affairs commissioner, Dr. Okoi Arikpo, said he hoped the Nigerian Olympic Committee will "give serious thought" to the OAU call for member countries to stay away from Munich.

Black African athletes were reluctant to discuss the controversy, but expressed surpris at the sudden withdrawal announcements.

AS BRITISH SUBJECTS

In allowing the break-away white-ruled British colony to participate, the Rhodesians were required to enrol as British subjects, march under the Union Jack and accept God Save the Queen as their national anthem.

If black African countries form a solid front against the International Olympic Committee, one source close to the Munich Organizing Committee said, they will lose much of their standing within the Olympic movement.

NIGERIAN CONCERNED

This concern also was raised by the Nigerian president of the Supreme Council for Sports in Africa, Abraham Ordia, who said in Lagos that a boycott would mean "we shall break faith with the world body and Africa will not be taken seriously again in the future."

Brundage, the 84-year-old American who plans to retire during the Games, flew into Munich Tuesday.

Surrounded by reporters as he climbed down the steps of the airliner, Brundage was asked to comment on the series of withdrawals.

MATTER SETTLED

"We think that the matter is settled," he replied.

The decision to admit Rhodesia on the same terms as at Tokyo in 1964 — as a British colony — was taken a year ago with all national Olympic committees represented.

The IOC leader, whose personal ruling a week ago that the invitation to Rhodesia must stand, will preside over a six-day IOC Congress starting Saturday, when the Rhodesian question may possibly be raised again.

Medalist, Ex-Champs Win First Matches

The medalist of the 50th annual Seniors North West Golf Association tournament and three former champions advanced to the eights Tuesday. Defending champion Bill Blakely of Portland, a six-time winner, and Dr. George Bigelow of Victoria, another ex-champion, had relatively easy wins as match-play started. But things were tougher for the 1970 champion, Bill Thompson of Victoria, and Jack Richardson of Vancouver, the medalist.

E. William Johnson of Seattle took Richardson to the 18th hole before yielding and Thompson had to go an extra hole to get by Bruce Shorts of Seattle.

Bigelow had the easiest time, topping Gordon Millin of Victoria, 7 and 6, while Blakely got by Carl Ruby of Vancouver, 4 and 3.

Others reaching the quarter-finals of the championship flight were Gordon Verley of Victoria, Ken Newbury and Harry Butler of Vancouver, and Dr. Ole Jensen of Seattle.

Verley defeated Max Hunter of Seattle on an extra hole; Newbury took a 3 and 2 victory from Thomas M. Green of Seattle; Butler topped Charles Davis of Portland, 4 and 2, and Jensen scored a 4 and 3 victory over John Kendall of Portland.

Blakely meets Jensen in an all-U.S. match at 8:30 this morning.

Richardson and Thompson tee off at 1:30 p.m. followed by Verley and Newbury, Bigelow and Butler, at 1:38.

Match-play competition in the flights continues through until Friday, when all finals are scheduled. Today's shotgun starts are at 8:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

Lineman Joins Als To Eagles Dismay

MONTREAL (CP) — Dan Yochum, the No. 2 draft choice of Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League, signed Tuesday with Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League.

Terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

The signing came as a bit of a surprise to the Eagles, who felt they had agreed to terms Monday with the 260-pound lineman, who played last season with Syracuse University.

"Everything seemed to be in order," said Eagles' general manager Pete Retzlaff. "We sent him over to Graduate Hospital to take his physical while I prepared the contract. He never came back."

Yochum said he felt he was better off coming to Montreal.

"I just think I got a better offer from Montreal. It's a better town and a better organization. I thought that this would be a better place to play.

"We didn't negotiate a whole lot with Philadelphia. The fact is, I didn't sign a contract and that's all that really matters. Nothing really counts until you put your name on the line."

Yochum arrived in Montreal Tuesday morning and worked out with the Alouettes in the afternoon.

Aussies Poised For Cricket Win

LONDON (Reuter) — Australia was poised for victory to square the series at 2-2 on the fifth day of the fifth and final cricket test against England at the Oval Tuesday.

Needing 242 runs for victory, Australia was 116 for one wicket at the close, with Keith Stackpole completing his sixth half-century of the season.

England had to play out the last hour without their captain and off-spinner Ray Illingworth, who twisted his right ankle. Illingworth is expected to be fit for today's final day's play, but medium-pacer Basil d'Oliveira is unlikely to take any further part in the match because of a back injury.

Earlier, England's last five wickets added 129 runs before they were eventually dismissed for 356. Wicket-keeper Alan Knott made the main contribution with 63.

Paceman Dennis Lillee took the bowling honors with five for 123 and match figures of ten for 181. His haul of 31 wickets for the series was a record for an Australian bowler in England.

Sooke Wins

Dick Barwes clubbed a home run to lead Sooke Merchants of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League to a 3-2 decision over William Head in an exhibition game Tuesday at Sooke Athletic Park.

Bruin Centre Set To Sign

BOSTON (AP) — Centre Fred Stanfield has agreed to terms with Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, his lawyer announced Monday.

His lawyer, Arnold Bloom, said Stanfield agreed to unannounced terms and was coming to Boston from Canada for the actual signing.

New Record

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Beers of Merritt, B.C., has broken the Canadian high-jump record with a jump of seven feet, one and three quarter inches in pre-Olympic competition in Munich, the British Columbia track and field association reported Sunday. Beers' jump was a quarter of an inch better than the previous record, set last September by John Hawkins.

Stockers Advance To Softball Final

Stockers North Americans lashed out with 18 hits in crushing Esquimalt Combos, 25-5, at Hyacinth Park Tuesday night.

It meant a sweep of the best-of-three Victoria Senior Women's Softball League semi-final for Stockers who won the first game Monday, 16-6. Stockers were runner-up in the league championship.

Cablevision, third-place finishers in the league, turned the tables on champions Empress Paint to square the other semi-final series, 1-1. Cablevision won, 8-2, Tuesday after dropping Monday night's opener, 4-8.

The teams meet in the deciding game at 6:30 tonight.

Ferguson Family Assured Tickets

TORONTO (CP) — John Ferguson, assistant coach of Team Canada, won't have to worry about wrangling a pair of tickets for his family to see the opening game of an exhibition hockey series with Russia in September.

The name of his 13-year-old daughter, Christine, was drawn in the lottery in Montreal for the opening game of the eight-game series at The Forum.

"I wrote her name on a coupon from a newspaper here in Toronto before I left for Russia," Ferguson said Tuesday. "She got the letter yesterday saying her name had been drawn and she telephoned me at the hotel to let me know.

Parise Receives Second Surprise

TORONTO (CP) — Jean Paul Parise, along with several thousand other hockey fans, was surprised when he was selected by Harry Sinden to play for Team Canada against the Soviets selects in September.

His second biggest surprise came when Sinden disclosed he'd be playing on a line with Boston Bruins' Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman.

The rugged Minnesota North Star winger will play the left side of Esposito. Sinden went so far as to move Cashman over to the right wing.

Cashman, a natural right winger when he entered the National Hockey League, was converted to the left by Sinden when the Team Canada general manager-coach was coach at Boston.

"Sometimes the people lose sight of where the stars are in the league," Sinden remarked when questioned as to his motives in playing Parise with the Bruin linemates.

"Ask the players about Parise." Sinden said the 30-year-old Parise was a much under-rated player.

"Phil has to have the puck to be most effective," Sinden explained. "So I want to have two wingers who are diggers and who can get it out of the corners."

Parise's past record speaks for itself. He had 48 assists for the North Stars a couple of years ago when that team was not particularly noted for its scoring outbursts.

Century Reaches Softball Final

Century Inn joined league-champion Bell's Men's Wear in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League final series which starts Thursday night.

Century captured their best-of-five semi-final series Tuesday with a 5-2 decision over Victoria Molsons at Heywood Avenue Park. The winners, who took the series, 3-1, erupted for four runs in the sixth inning for the victory, getting four of their five hits in the rally.

One-out singles by Jim Buchan and John Paul in the big inning knocked out Carl Hanson. Mel Nelson came on to relieve and loaded the bases by walking Gord Rutherford, who smacked a fifth-inning home run. Don Kilshaw drove in two runs with a single and Barney Spaven followed with a two-run single.

George Wellings limited Molsons to three hits. Two of the hits were by Jim Sharpe, who hit a triple and single, driving in one run.

Toronto Thief Satisfies Desire for Long Green

TORONTO (CP) — Police are looking for someone with the longest, narrowest lawn in town and a touch of larceny in his soul.

Officials of the Canadian National Exhibition, say someone stole a section of artificial turf five yards wide and 110 yards long from the home of the Toronto Argonauts of the Eastern Football Conference.

The strip, valued at $4,000, was a replacement piece kept in the Horse Palace in case the CNE stadium surface needed patching.

Ballard Convicted of Theft, Fraud

TORONTO (CP) — President Harold Ballard of Maple Leaf Gardens, home of sports heroes, was convicted Tuesday of 47 fraud and theft charges involving almost $205,000 in Gardens funds.

The 69-year-old executive was acquitted by County Judge Harry Deyman of two minor fraud charges totalling $196.75.

As he handed down a 122-page decision after six weeks of trial, Judge Deyman adjourned the case for sentence to Sept. 7, when defence counsel J. J. Robinette will produce character witnesses.

Ballard, who gained control of the National Hockey League Maple Leafs' home base in a $7.5 million deal earlier this year, could receive up to 20 years in prison.

He was charged with having participated with his late partner, C. Stafford Smythe, in defrauding the Gardens of $82,000 and stealing another $123,000 from the sports arena firm.

Smythe, a former Gardens president and son of founder Conn Smythe, also was charged but died last October before being brought to trial.

Ballard and the younger Smythe were accused of having stolen the $123,000 by diverting to a private bank account cheques intended for Toronto Marlboros, a junior hockey team which they had sold to the Gardens.

Amont the allegations was one that in a single year the arena company paid $69,200 to improve Ballard's home in suburban Etobicoke and another that the Gardens paid for motorcycles for his two sons under the billing of "hockey sticks."

Aftr the judgement was hunded down, Mr. Robinette asked that the judge in passing sentence take into account Ballard's age, his "good reputation" and the fact that restitution was made to the Gardens.

He said there was no questions but that Ballard and the younger Smythe had done an efficient job for the Gardens shareholders over a 10-year period.

In the decision, Judge Deyman rejected Mr. Robinette's earlier submission that Ballard did not know repairs and alterations to his home were being charged up as work on the Gardens itself.

"I find it completely incredible," he wrote, "that a businessman of Mr. Ballard's acumen could have goods and services of such a variety and cost furnished to him to his knowledge without expecting to pay for them."

"It deems to me that a clear pattern of fraud emerges from a consideration of the whole of the evidence.

"This fraud was perpetrated in one of three ways: Invoices were falsified by the supplier . . . or, alternatively, the supplier sent a proper invoice and it was changed at Maple Leaf Gardens.

"Or thirdly, the cases in which composite invoices have been filed showing work which was properly billed to Maple Leaf Gardens but including work which should have been properly billed to Ballard and Smythe."

The two counts on which Ballard was acquitted involved $11.95 charged to Gardens repairs, which the Crown alleged was for repairs to a TV antenna at the Ballard home, and $184.80 for upholstering directors' chairs at the Gardens which the Crown claimed was used for improvements to the home.

Among the charges which the court upheld was an allegation that the Ballard-Smythe private savings account received cheques from the NHL for player draft payments as well as playoff pool money from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the Ontario Hockey Association, in which Marlboros play.

Short Strike Over

As construction disputes go, this one will have to go into the books as a one-day wonder — or less.

Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, much more familiar with the protracted form of strike, took its pickets off Oak Bay Manor at 2.15 p.m. Tuesday, exactly 23 hours and 15 minutes after they were posted.

John Schibli, the local's president, said the short-lived strike ended when the operators of the recently-opened retirement centre agreed to meet the terms of the new industry-wide contract.

The six carpenters involved had been put directly on the payroll of Oak Bay Manor Ltd. several months ago after a sub-contractor ran into financial problems.

The men had been paid under terms of the last contract, Schibli said, Failure to arrange negotiations concerning the new industry contract had led to the strike.

The carpenters will now move up to $6.54an hour from $6.15, but the main item is retroactive pay dating back to May 1, he said.

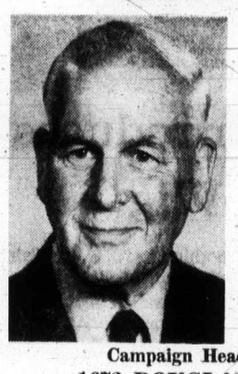

"These were the conditions of settlement and we haven't asked that a contract be signed because the work at Oak Bay Manor will probably only last another week or two," Schibli said.

Disappointment for Politician

Anderson Decries Voters' Apathy

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Liberal leader David Anderson said Tuesday he is disappointed at what he called a low level of public debate on political issues in the Aug. 30 election.

"Some of the things we'd like to talk about apparently don't interest people very much," Anderson told a news conference. "It's a disappointment for a politician when the issues he thinks are important don't get much response."

Anderson said he has failed to spark much interest with speeches on changes in labor legislation, education, taxation, finance, municipal affairs, hospital and senior citizens.

He said he agrees with New Democratic Party leader Dave Barrett that the current campaign is less emotional than the 1969 election. "What the lower level of public interest means I can't tell. It may mean (voters) have long since decided they are not going to vote Social Credit, and they're simply not following things that closely. It may mean the reverse. I just can't tell."

Anderson said he is surprised that the public, newspapers and other media appear unconcerned about what he called dishonesty, corruption and bribery practiced by the Social Credit party in having candidates present government cheques in their ridings.

He said the Socred candidate in Atlin, Jack Anderson, recently handed over a cheque for $35,000 in public funds to an Indian association for a community hall in Telegraph Creek.

Anderson told 200 persons at a service club luncheon here a Liberal government would enact legislation requiring public hearings on the environmental impact of proposed developments. He also called for B.C. to move towards more flexible and co-operative participation in the Canadian federal system.

The Liberal leader made brief appearances in Campbell River and Powell River, but stayed longer in Port Alberni. All three are centres of Socred-held ridings where Liberals ran a distant third in 1969.

At Powell River, members of the Mackenzie Liberal association presented Anderson with a slingshot and a note saying: "It's been done before and about to be done again."

Anderson said he liked the reference to the David and Goliath story, and suggested he could use two sling shots, one for the Socreds and one for the U.S. government.

He said there is a need to improve ferry service in the Powell River area and to create more flexibility and better service in the ferry service generally. He urged building a terminal in the vicinity of Iona Island for runs between Vancouver and Nanaimo, and a system for spacing vehicle loads to avoid congestion at certain times of the day.

He also repeated his call for a provincial nursing home scheme similar to one in Alberta, where the government pays subsidies of $3.50 a day per patient.

Anderson said in response to a question that there should be a time limit of 10 to 15 years from now, after which sales of recreational land in B.C. would be restricted to Canadians.

He said in a later interview that such a restriction would allow non-Canadians, mainly Americans, to continue owning land and to pass it on to their children, but would ensure that control would pass eventually to Canadians.

Anderson criticized the government's education finance formula and labor relations policies, saying he sometimes thinks the Socreds encourage industrial strife because it enables them to win the election.

B.C. Buying Back Land

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Lands and Forest Minister Ray Williston announced Monday that the provincial government is purchasing a large parcel of land on the Queen Charlotte Islands from a group of Americans.

Williston, chairman of the greenbelt protection fund, said the tract at Tlell is currently owned by the Dunes Fishing and Game Co., headed by singer Bing Crosby.

He did not disclose the price of the land.

The green belt protection fund was set up during the last session of the legislature to purchase park and forest land around communities.

Food Packaging Rapped

NDP Hopeful Fights Skyrocketing Prices

CAMPBELL RIVER — Comox NDP candidate Karen Sanford Tuesday night pledged to fight skyrocketing food prices on Vancouver Island and outlined a six-point program of price controls at the provincial level.

She told an overflow crowd in the legion hall here that the Bennett government had failed to exercise its responsibility in attempting to curb food prices which she claimed had increased by as much as 300 per cent over the past year.

An NDP government would strive to protect the consumer from a price increases imposed mainly by food chain stores. She then outlined a series of proposals to achieve this end.

- Eliminating wasteful and expensive packaging;
- Accelerate unit pricing;
- Establish a price review board as an alternative to unrestricted price increases and to press the federal government to scrutinize more closely monopoly pricing in foodstuffs;
- Producer and consumer co-ops should be encouraged;
- A consumer education program should be instituted to advise people how to obtain the best possible nutrition within their budgets;
- Island freight rates which contribute substantially to higher food prices on Vancouver Island should be either reduced or subsidized to cut the cost of living for Island residents.

Mrs. Sanford said an NDP government would "commit itself to these goals."

She went on to attack the present government for its failure to live up to its promises of a new north island highway. She said the present road link is dusty, dangerous and provides only limtied public access to northern communities.

"All the government has done is to provide bits and pieces of black top and has left us with a lot of unfulfilled promises and a ferry design (from Kelsey Bay to Beaver Cove) for maximum discomfort."

Referring to a Social Credit campaign advertisement which shows a smooth blacktopped highway and advises voters August 30 not to take a rutted dirt road which turns to the left, Mrs. Sanford told the applauding audience: "The ad should have said the blacktop leads to Kelowna and the other road to Beaver Cove."

Earlier, NDP Leader Dave Barrett attended a luncheon at Powell River which drew 150 supporters at $5 a plate. In a brief address he predicted that premier Bennett would shortly begin a campaign of smear, vilification, and personal attacks on the NDP. But, he said no matter how much money the government spends or how many insults it hurls, the voters will know better than to support a failing government at the polls August 30.

Both in Powell River and Campbell River Barrett gave his audiences the same message: "Tell Mr. Bennett you're fed up by electing a fighting opposition MLA to represent you in Victoria."

There's almost nothing to it . . . the "almost nothing" is in the cap. Full of holes and full of air and so lightweight that when you wear it you can forget it. All of Reid-Meredith's caps are lightweight. But "The Spun Air" is carried to the lightest extreme. In a process that's something like dropping stitches in crocheting, but a lot more scientific, the Reid-Meredith people came up with these spun knit bands held together by gossamer threads. (The diagram explains it.) The result is a bantam-weight air-conditioner, right there on top of your head. Cool breezes can blow through it, but your hair can't show through. "The Spun Air" of Dynel, the modacrylic fiber that behaves itself better than your own hair, comes in colors especially blended to look natural (in a range of 16 interesting shades). And, of course, an expert in our Wig Salon will cut and shape it for you. "The Spun Air" comes in two different styles. Each of them really pretty. And really nothing. Easily handled, too. Alderman Gives Coca-Cola Lashing for 'Lack of Conscience'

Sign Ban Forges Ahead Despite Industry Protests

Advertising industry representatives failed in a last-minute attempt Tuesday to stop Victoria's new sign bylaw from going into effect.

Top officials of the national sign industry appeared before council's public works committee in opposition to the new bylaw which will eliminate within three years all billboards, roof signs, and third-party advertising, including signs painted on building walls.

The bylaw was given third reading at last week's council meeting. In accordance with the B.C. Municipal Act, final approval was delayed until next week's council meeting.

Following a sometimes heated session between council members and the delegation, committee didn't make any motion to delay final passing.

Statements from aldermen indicated that all but Ald. Percy Frampton are still in complete agreement with the bylaw's intent.

The most serious indictment of the sign industry came from Mayor Peter Pollen and Ald. Mike Young.

Young said it was about time the industry conformed with the wishes of the community instead of the other way around.

He lashed out at the Coca-Cola company for having consistently failed to make any contribution to society.

Garish signs all over the world, he said, were a manifestation of the firm's lack of conscience.

"Is this their contribution to culture?" he asked. "It's a contribution to the Coca-Cola Culture."

Young's remarks were directed toward Joe Whitmore of Toronto who is employed by the Coca-Cola Co., but represented the Association of National Advertisers at the meeting.

Whitmore told committee outdoor advertising was an important part of the economy. Third-party advertising (signs advertising goods or services not available on the premises on which the signs are displayed) was helpful to the consumer because it told him where to find a certain business.

He said eliminating all billboards was "far down the road as far as interfering with free enterprise in concerned."

He said the bylaw was "too much, too fast, too much prohibition."

Stan Whittle of Vancouver, representing Neon Products Ltd., told committee the city shouldn't have prepared the bylaw without consulting the industry.

Young replied that his suggestion to let the advertising industry draw up the bylaw was "absolute garbage."

Whittle said his firm had plans to "upgrade the industry," but was prevented from going through with these plans by council's action.

Whittle also told committee the bylaw would place economic hardship on businesses using outdoor advertising as a means of publicizing their goods and services.

The mayor replied that he was the biggest car dealer in the city but had no reservations about the bylaw.

Pollen also accused the industry of doing "everything to thwart the aspirations of the community.

"Surely, for the salvation of our cities, the first consideration must be an overriding responsibility to the community."

Ald. Clyde Savage told the delegation the city would no longer tolerate the proliferation of billboards.

"Until now, we have had no pressure whatsoever from the business community. All businessmen I have talked to, are in favor of the bylaw. They think it's a good thing to control signing," he said.

Success Ends Recycling

By JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Reporter

Project Recycle, which during the past two years has collected hundreds of tons of resources from Greater Victoria's garbage heaps, will close Sept. 15, it was announced Monday.

The reason: it has been so successful that it is no longer is possible for the few people who work at the central depot to carry on.

In announcing their predicament, spokesmen for Project Recycle also stated that they were at once asking municipal councils in Greater Victoria, candidates in the Aug. 30 provincial election and officers of various government departments to take over their program, at least on a pilot basis.

Spokesmen say the project has proven that people are willing to separate their wastes and, as a result, municipal pick-ups would have low initial cost. Material sent to the recycling depot means that much less for the garbage service, thus reducing those costs.

"A municipal pickup service is feasible because tax monies presently allocated for garbage pickup are paid for by recyclees, even though they hardly use the service," said a spokesman. "Therefore, persons wishing to recycle waste could be provided with a 'recycling' pickup, through their present taxes, in lieu of one or more of their regular garbage pickups."

Project Recycle's proposal for continuation of the program suggests the regional district be responsible for assembling, shipping and administering the products collected.

The provincial government could help finance the project and the federal government could assist by subsidizing freight and tarrifs on products sent to plants for reprocessing.

"This proposal would encourage non-polluting secondary materials industries to locate within the region, stimulating employment," said the spokesman.

"In addition, this is a unique opportunity for our region to lead the nation in implementation of municipal solid waste recycling at a time when most other North American communities are just beginning to explore the possibilities of this approach.

People working for Project Recycle have had operating funds, all from the federal government, for 11 of the past 20 months.

An indication of how the idea has caught on in Greater Victoria is the following data on paper and cardboard that has been handled at the depot at McKenzie and Borden: March-August, 1971, 18¼ tons; September-December, 1971, 44 tons; January-April this year, 96½ tons, May to date, about 200 tons.

During 1971, it collected 3½ tons of glass while this year about 100 tons have been salvaged. This year it has collected about 40 tons of tin cans, and all but 15 tons have been sent to a smelter.

"Although the municipalities of Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich have given badly-needed material and moral support, the real responsibility for solid waste disposal lies with the provincial department of municipal affairs and the Capital Regional District," said a spokesman.

Project Recycle has been unique in Canada in the stress that it has had on volunteers and the need for individual initiative in separating various wastes and transporting them to the depot.

Construction Shutdown

Tory Sees Charges Dropped

BC 72 X

Charges against building trades unions under the Mediation Commission Act laid during the construction shutdown earlier this summer will probably not be proceeded with now that there is an election campaign on, a Conservative candidate predicted Tuesday.

John Williams, running for PCs in Esquimalt, said on an Esquimalt all-candidates forum on Cablevision 10 that he doubted the Social Credit government would dare to take such controversial charges to court during a campaign and would more likely withdraw them or just not proceed.

The charges against a number of building trades union locals were laid after union members did not obey a cabinet back-to-work order issued under the compulsory section of the Mediation Commision Act.

Those compulsory sections came under sharp attack from all three opposition candidates on the forum but incumbent Socred MLA Herb Bruch said "There's nothing wrong with Bill 33 (the Mediation Commission Act) as long as you have citizens who are prepared to adhere to the law."

However, the act had been "exceptionally difficult" to implement because of the defiance of "labor leaders who are affiliated with the NDP."

"I believe there is no room for any group in our society to say 'I will make my own rules, I will defy,'" Bruch said.

Liberal candidate Don Joy said the compulsory sections of the act were "probably the toughest piece of anti-labor legislation that any province in Canada has."

But the Social Credit government seemed to be "afraid to put it into effect." If it was not used, "why have it?" he asked.

He would prefer to have representatives of labor and managment sit down with the government and draft new labor legislation.

NDP cadidate Jim Gorst promised his party would repeal Bill 33 and replace it with free collective bargaining for all employees helped out by a fulltime labor relations board and all possible assistance from government.

Park Bicycle Gang Nabbed by Police

A gang of five young boys which during recent months has stolen bicycles in the Central Park area, remodelled them and sold or gave them away, has been uncovered by Victoria police.

Police said in a report Tuesday that the youthful offenders — ranging from 9 to 14 years old — have been chastised and no charges are pending for the time being.

The boys, whose leader was the 14-year-old, admitted to police Monday they had stolen several bicycles.

The bicycles were taken home, dismantled and parts were transferred from bike to bike to hinder recognition by their owners.

The 14-year-old boy said he was the mechanic who dismantled and re-assembled the bicycles. The 9-year-old boy did most of the stealing, police said.

The boys told police they had formed a "bicycle gang" and membership requirements consisted of stealing a bicycle.

'Low Morale At Hospital Policy Fault'

Alleged low moral among staff members of Victoria General Hospital can be traced to a "succession of disappointments through the years" arising from government policies, says Dr. J. L. Heffernan, president of the hospital's medical staff.

Hefferman was interviewed Monday night after he and several other representatives of doctors who practice there had a meeting with the hospital's board of management to discuss, among other things, morale problems that have been raised in recent weeks.

Dr. Embert Van Tilburg, the hospital's executive director, stated that such problems were among his reasons for resigning and last week a spokesman for the Hospital Employees' Union, representing the largest group of that hospital's workers, made similar observations. He suggested one solution might be in the provincial government simply taking over the hospital's administration.

Heffernan said the doctors are "thoroughly distressed" by the outdated facilities at the hospital. For example, the newborn nursery was considered archaic 20 years ago. Another example is the four-bed intensive care unit which has to be doubled or tripled in size as soon as possible.

Some of the problems can be traced to the era when the hospital was owned and operated by the Sisters of St. Ann, when the public regarded the former St. Joseph's Hospital as a private institution and did not give it all the support it needed.

However, recently doctors have become concerned about the failure of the provincial government to respond to the hospital's needs. It was being short-changed on both capital requirements and staff while at the same time being expected to care for more persons in more serious stages of illness, said Heffernan.

He also explained that the doctors reviewed with the board of management the resignations of four members of the hospital's administration during the past 18 months. Each person left for separate reasons.

Heffernan said the board of management was doing its best for the hospital despite the hardships imposed by governments.

Hydro Sprays 'Idiotic'

'You'll Be Liable To Die' Says Work Opponent

Spraying by B.C. Hydro crews near the Spectacle Lake Provincial Park on the Malahat was termed "idiotic and unnecessary" Tuesday by a resident in the area.

"You should take a walk up there.

"But don't stay too long or you'll be liable to die," Arthur Hall, owner of Hall's Marina told the Colonist by telephone Tuesday.

Hall said the spray, 2, 4-D, gave off a sickly smell and had been used on spirea bush cover which in no way would interfere with Hydro power lines in the area.

Three years ago, Hall complained about Hydro crews spraying along the main power line in the area, which eventually killed off most of the quail in the area and also some deer.

This time the Hydro spraying is on the old power line to Bamberton, which crosses the road to Spectacle Lake in two places.

Hall said the Hydro sprayers were in the area about three weeks ago.

He hopes to spur action to stop further "indiscriminate" spraying with 2, 4-D through public reaction.

B.C. Hydro has three spraying crews working throughout Vancouver Island.

According to wildlife biologist Rory Finnegan of the provincial fish and wildlife branch, the spraying has to be approved by the interdepartmental committee on pesticides.

Finnegan said Tuesday spot applications had been cleared by the committee for areas where Hydro considered spraying vital and urgent for the safety of its men, power lines and the public.

Workemen might have to work on power lines at any time and the immediate area had to be kept clear of trees and bush which might endanger the workmen.

He added that B.C. Hydro was aware of the concern of wildlife biologists that animals could be killed because of the spraying projects.

Three years ago the quail and deer ate foliage which had chemically changed because of the spraying. Poisonous ragwort had built up more sugar because of the spray and had become attractive to wildlife.

Finnegan said he had heard of no reports of wildlife dying because of the recent spray near Spectacle Lake and he attributed this to more careful use of the pesticide by Hydro crews.

The trouble three years ago had been caused by a poor spraying job by the crews.

"The whole thing was an exercise in futility then but techniques have changed and we don't expect any trouble this time," he said.

B.C. Hydro's transmission supervisor for the Island, Barry Hall said from his Nanaimo office Tuesday that the Spectacle Lake spraying was just one area of the overall program.

Trouble was being had in many areas with alder trees which grew five to eight feet a year and interfered with transmission lines.

He was not aware of any problems caused by spraying near Spectacle Lake.

Meanwhile in Richmond, the municipal council has decided to investigate the use of chemical herbicides by B.C. Hydro after a woman claimed plants had been destroyed on her property through Hydro spraying near her house.

A University of British Columbia botanist, who took samples of damaged plants from Ruby Mundreon's property, said herbicides were involved. Hydro officers blamed aphids and the heat for the damage.

Weather Gloom Looming

The present rainy spell, which broke a 34-day drought, is going to continue for a few days, says the Victoria weather office.

A total of .18 inches fell Monday night, the first rain since July 12 and more fell Tuesday night. Forecast for today is more rain and continued coolness.

Cause of the sudden drop in temperatures and the wet weather is a cold low front which moved into B.C. from the Cascade Mountains in Washington and Oregon, bringing thunder and lightning in its wake.

Cloudy, cool weather will continue for the next few days, with some rain. Temperatures will range from the high 60s during the day to the low 50s at night.

Totals $400

Woman Dies in Highway Crash

A 33-year-old Glen Lake woman was killed Tuesday morning in a collision between a car and a two-ton truck near Four-Mile Hill on the Old Island Highway, View Royal.

Colwood RCMP identified the dead woman as Mrs. Marilyn E. Hilton, of 3164 Ayton Place, wife of D. H. Hilton.

An RCMP spokesman said the accident happened about 10:35 a.m. while Mrs. Hilton, alone in her car, was driving west on the Old Island Highway toward Colwood.

On Four-Mile Hill, the car was in collision with a two-ton paving truck, owned by Victoria Paving Co., which was being driven east by Paul Fanning, of 150 Eberts.

Fanning was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated for minor injuries and released.

Two passengers in the truck, Ed Jorgensen of 1782 Rockland, and Marcel Loren, of 1076 Marigold, Saanich, did not require medical treatment.

Mrs. Hilton was pronounced dead on arrival at Victoria hospital.

RCMP said a light drizzle was falling at the time of the accident, and the road surface was wet and slippery.

The force of the collision caused both vehicles to skid on the side of the road but they didn't hit anything else, RCMP said.

Rising Ballet Star

He Soars with Greatest of Ease

By BOB MICKLIN
Colonist-Newsday Service

NEW YORK — Like most male ballet dancers, Paolo Bortoluzzi is a little smaller than the average man, slender and lean as a greyhound. When he walks, he steps along quickly and purposefully, his body held straight with the natural line that dancers learn to hold through years of training until it becomes instinctive.

Whether walking, sitting or standing, however, Bortoluzzi projects an unusually efficient manner. In some ways, he reminds you of a racing-car driver — the steadiness of his attitude, the confidence, the lack of vague or superfluous gestures and movements. Bortoluzzi is a man who appears to know exactly what he wants.

After 12 years as a leading male dancer with Maurice Bejart's Ballet of the 20th Centrury in Belgium, Bortoluzzi has decided that what he wants is to broaden his experience and reputation. He has signed a one year contract with American Ballet Theatre as a principal dancer, and already is being featured with the company during their current engagement at Lincoln Centre. If he gains the sort of acclaim he has received in Europe — and already both critics and audiences in New York are enthusiastic — he promises to become, at 34, one of the great male stars of international ballet.

With Ballet Theater he is partnering two of the company's leading ballerinas — Natalia Makarova and Carla Fracci. A male dancer simply doesn't step into such partnerships unless he is good enough and confident enough to match his skills againt the best. Fracci's last partnership was at Ballet Theater with the great Erik Bruhn, and Makarova, too, was Bruhn's partner for a brief while.

But Bortoluzzi is a very different kind of dancer from Bruhn. Bruhn was the impeccable classicist who danced with such pure, intense style that he seemed the personification of the noble danseur. Bortoluzzi, if he can be compared to any current star, might be likened to Rudolf Nureyev. Both have an ostentatious, melodramatic flair. Both are concerned with showmanship as well as with dancing. Both dance with elaborate but feline ease. Both, at times, threaten to become personalities rather than just dancers on stage. Both have been called "beautiful" male dancers.

Bortulozzu's amaging grace enables him to cover vast amounts of space with seemingly little effort, but it is in his leaps that he is most impressive. Most male dancers are more Willie Mays than Joe Dimaggio — that is, they tend to make the difficult look difficult.

Mays racing for a flyball, cap flying off his head as he runs, gives us the picture of a man on a desperate, perhaps impossible, mission. DiMaggio floating across the outfield seemed to head for the ball with almost casual inevitability. Mays astonishes you when he finally makes the catch. DiMaggio astonished you if he didn't.

Bortoluzzi, like DiMaggio, is a floater. "I have a body gifted for dancing," he says in his soft, Italian-accented English. He is right, for he has little difficulty with most muscle-twisting contortions, and when he leaves the ground, he soars through the air as if suspended on wires.

Yet his career is rather unusual for a business that starts out training its artists when they are small children. Bortolizzi didn't begin dance schooling until 15. A native of Genoa, he came from a family who did not want their son to be a dancer.

"We had a lot of big fights," he said recently.

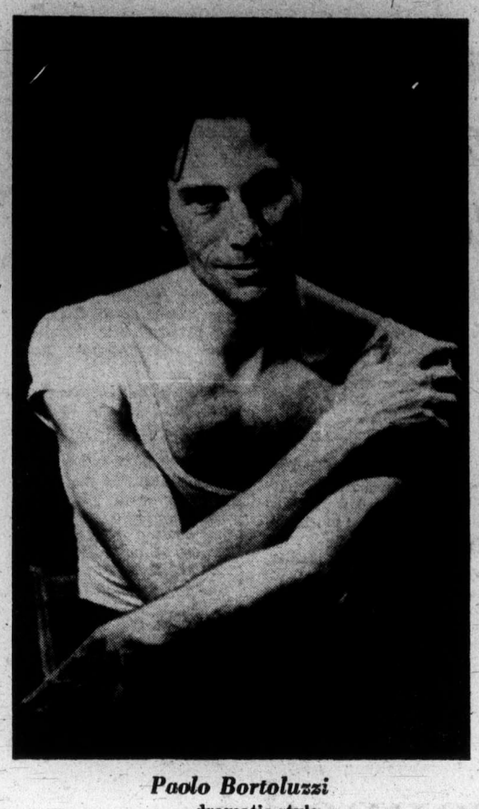

"They thought my life would be broken if I danced, but I loved music and the theatre. I had a lot of problems in school, too. I liked gymnastics, but I would much rather go to ballet class than study."

He realizes now, he said, that it is important "not to leave school to dance," but at 18 he was already a professional and by the time he joined Bejart in 1960, he had already danced with several smaller companies.

With Bejart, he danced more modern than classical ballets. The Bejart company is a deliberately contemporary organization which sometimes places more emphasis on theatrical effect than on pure dance. One of Bortoluzzi's most unusual roles, in fact, was that of the firebird — a role traditionslly danced by a ballerina.

Yet he has done his share of classical ballet outside the Bejart discipline. Giselle and Swan Lake at La Scala, Swan Lake at Geneva, The Sleeping Beauty, Nutcracker and Copellia in Germany and, in Italy, George Balanchine's Apollo.

"Until I danced Apollo recently, I had never done anything by Balanchine before," Bortoluzzi said, "And it was . . . amazing. It seemed like that ballet was made for my body. I've never had such a feeling before. I'm sure other dancers have experienced it, but for me it was a wonderful feeling."

Paolo Bortoluzzi
. . . dramatic style

After a dozen years with Bejart, however, he feels that the classical roles must be approached with contemporary attitudes. "there is one way of looking at ballet that says that it should preserve the old things, like a museum. But I don't think you should necessarily keep things the way they were 20 years ago — 50 years ago. In 20 years from now, dancing will have changed. A dancer should have freedom. A dancer should be beautiful to watch. He must also be very strong physically and mentally. He must not just copy. I do things in Le Spectre de la Rose that no one ever taught me."

He lit another cigaret ("I smoke about 10 or 15 a day," he said, laughing. "It is the only pleasure I have") and said that with ballet theatre, in addition to Spectre, La Sylphide, Giselle, and the new Variations for Four, he perhaps will dance Pillar of Fire and a few others.

He said that he still has to acquaint himself with Ballet Theatre's "more quick" American style, and that seems accurate. Several observers both inside and outside the company have remarked on his grand European stage mannerisms, especially his elaborate hand and arm movements. "Most men dancers never pay any attention to their hands and arms," he said. "I do." Yet in the context of Ballet Theatre's style, such gestures sometimes look flamboyant.

Married two years ago to a Bejart dancer, Jaleh Kerundi, he and his wife make their permanent home in Brussels. They are expecting their first child next month. "If he . . ." Bortoluzzi began, then smiled. "If the child wants to be a dancer," he continued, "I will explain how hard it is. How much work. All the bad things as well as the good things. If they still want to dance, if the gift is there, I will be happy."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My husband just handed me the newspaper and said, "Read this." I thought it would be your usual column saying something about how women should let their husbands run themselves bowlegged while the wife looks the other way. (This is what I call The Ann Landers Forgive-and-Forget Syndrome.) But it was even worse than that.

It quoted a New York doctor as saying, "Sex is not only here to stay but it will help you stay here longer." The nut then went on to praise sex as wonderful exercise for the heart, "also a fine tranquilizer." He said, "If a man is in good health, sex will help him stay well." The author didn't say what it would do for the woman who has done a big laundry, ironed nine shirts and chased after three kids all day.

In spite of all this gibberish about liberation, women are still enslaved and will remain so for biological reasons. It's a dirty trick, played on them by the Creator and nothing can change that. Sign me — Pooped In Philadelphia

Dear Pooped In Philly: If you consider sex a "dirty trick" against women, I feel sorry for your husband — and sorrier for you.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son will be coming home in a few weeks. He went four years to Stanford, Palo Alto for the summer. We paid his tuition for four years, but he lived up to his responsibilities by making good grades and staying out of trouble.

During his senior year he shared an apartment with a girl. We let him know we did not approve, but we didn't forbid it. We reasoned that a 21-year-old boy has the right to live as he pleases away from home.

Yesterday we received a letter requesting that we take the twin beds out of his room and replace them with one large bed which he is willing to pay for. True, I know our son and this girl were sleeping together in California, but somehow I can't bring myself to permit it in our house. What do you say, Ann? — Greenwich Mother

Dear Mother: I'm with you. To provide a single bed for the comfort and convenience of your son and his girl friend is tacit approval, if not encouragement of their premarital sexual activity. Stick to your principles and tell him nothing doing.

Expensive Net Snares Poodle

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Anna Hilden doesn't begrudge having spent almost $1,000 for the return of her 10-month-old French poodle, Fifi.

"I love that dog with all my heart," she said of the white-haired pooch she purchased two months ago for $88.

Since Fifi's mysterious disappearance July 9, the woman advertised on radio and in the newspapers, pleading for her pet's return. City police also were called in.

Initially, a $100 reward was offered. When this didn't produce results, Mrs. Hilden, a restaurant owner, raised the reward to $500. Finally, earlier this week, she engaged Pinkerton's, a private investigating agency.

Pinkerton's investigator, John Starrett of Toronto, arrived in the city Thursday. Friday, the dog was back in the hands of her owner.

In addition to a $500 rate, Mrs. Hilden said she also paid the investigator's plane fare to Thunder Bay, as well as other expenses.

Starrett located the dog 14 miles from home. It was staying with a family, whose members said they had been given the dog by someone moving out of town. Mrs. Hilden gave the family $100 for their trouble. "As soon as the dog saw her, she raced to Mrs. Hilden . . . made a big fuss over her," said Starratt. "You never saw a happier women."

Since he isn't allowed to accept a reward, Starrett was given a thick steak and mushroom dinner "on the house at Mrs. Hilden's restaurant.

Piano-Tuner Blues

LONDON (UPI) —The British household is a great place for someone with a tin ear.

Audits of Great Britain, a survey firm reporting on its check of British home pianos for the Piano Publicity Association, said 18 per cent of all pianos in British homes—400,000 of them—have never been tuned.

They're also never played, which may be just as well.

"It must be reasonably assumed that the greater number of these instruments are useless," the publicity association said.

The survey found about 2,700,000 piano players in Britain, with 2,150,000 pianos among them in private homes. Of those pianos, it said, 58 per cent have not been tuned for at least two years.

Modern Lighting Here to Stay

Colonist-Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Modern lighting, like furniture, is not the "here today, gone tomorrow" style it was expected to be, according to Charles Burke.

Furniture designer Burke said here that "modern is not a fad."

Modern, he said, will still be here tomorrow because we are actually living with tomorrow's styles today. In modern lighting, it is impossible to borrow from the past because there is none.

"The electric lamp as we know it in our time has no historical roots, unlike much of today's furniture," he said.

"Only in the last four or five years has modern lighting been used by interior designers as an individual part of decorating, rather than being recessed by the architect.

"Today's lamp is more than just a base, a shade and a cord," said Burke. "It is a piece of sculpture."

He mentioned two modern forms that have already become classics: the orbital globe lamp and the arc lamp.

"No one would have ever thought that a lamp that weighs as much as your oldest son and stands as tall as your husband could become a lamp. Yet, it is more of a necessity than a luxury today."

Consumers are including a touch of modern in any style decorating they use today, said Burke, who has been part of the home furnishings field since 1959.

He is a young California manufacturer who has worked his way up in the industry and has thus become familiar with all of its phases.

Talking more about consumer buying trends, he noted that buying a lamp has become as serious a purchase as a sofa and that selection today is based on design more than price.

Consumers can no longer buy just modern, said Burke, but can choose from any of the three modern encompasses: today's ultra modern; contemporary, a soft-edged approach to ulta modern, or tomorrow's avant-garde modern.

Burke said he likes to refer to most of today's lighting as avant-modern because he considers it a cross between ultra modern and avant-garde.

And, according to Burke, when it comes to new lighting, "the creed of the modern manufacturer is 'nothing is impossible,' which means that the consumer can expect to see even more avant-garde lighting merchandise."

Looking around at the new offerings, one wonders what will come next in lighting. Already there are lamps that look more like trees and teapots. One of the newest forms is city skylights, a collection of Plexiglas columns lighted from underneath.

Today's lamps are more honest. There are still lamps meant to double as end tables or planters, and others hidden under guises like cacti and ceramic animals.

But more apparent in modern lighting is the use of the big globe, bulb covers made to look like the barebulbs themselves. Even some of the fun lights look like giant light bulbs, filaments and all.

Lights are bigger, brighter and better. Tiny, bright shafts of light from single bulbs have given way to diffused light coming from a cluster of big bulbs.

Art To Spread Wings on Fort?

By BERT BINNY

As far as the white man is concerned, its story goes back to June 10, 1790, when the good ship Princess Royal, confiscated by the Spanish from the British, dropped anchor in its sheltering harbor. From 1795 to 1848 only Indian war canoes utilized the harbor but in July of 1848, the British Man-o'-war Constance arrived, heralding a long era of constant and increasing use.

The frigate Tribune arrived in early 1859 as a reinforcement owing to the San Juan Island dispute.

In 1878 gun positions were constructed at Macaulay Point. In 1886 the Colonist published a report on Esquimalt's defences; the graving dock was completed the next year. The red brick stores and offices at the Naval Yard were begun in 1890. In 1906 the British Navy withdrew when Canada undertook its own defences.

But the guns at Macaulay Point kept their silent watch over the "place of gradual shoaling" — which is what Esquimalt means — until after the Second World War.

On the sadder side of the story is the Point Ellice disaster of May 26, 1896. The bridge collapsed as a streetcar, loaded with eager spectators on their way to a sham battle at Macaulay Point, entered the span.

Now the area has been abandoned, becoming a target for vandalism even including the wrenching of barred windows from their frames.

Three years ago, however, three buildings were rescued from utter destruction and now form the Signal Hill Creative Centre.

And the rest?

Macaulay Point is owned by the Department of National Defence. Because of its significant historical value, the historic parks branch of the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development has first option on the 46-acre property and it is understood that the municipality of Esquimalt has expressed interest in acquiring it for a park area.

But a bold, imaginative proposal which combines modern practicality with historical sentiment, has been advanced by Concept Associates, M. F. Dawson and R. L. Clapp.

This would extend the present Creative Centre into a Multi-Media Arts Centre, the only institution of its kind in Canada, where a student could select, study and practise any Art he desires — and all in one place.

The plan incorporates as much of the existing structures as possible, retaining the external features for historic purposes and identifying each of these with a suitable plaque.

Thus, many intriguing visions emerge: The former fort fire control post becoming a stage control centre; the old magazines doing duty as pottery kilns or smelting furnaces.

Gunnery range finders would come to life again as spotlights and there would be orchestras playing where once was, perhaps, a rather forbidding parapet. Even the gun positions themselves would be retained and utilized.

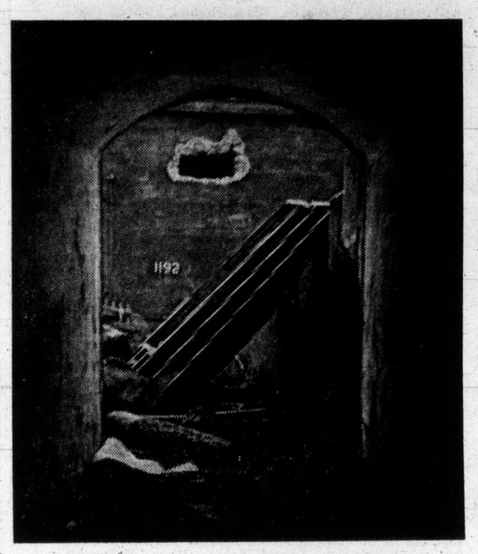

Included in the concept are a theatre to accommodate 2,800 spectators; a spherical stage area, 90x150 feet; two lecture halls for 400 students, a sound stage, art studios for a further 400 students, four printing and engraving shops for 200, departments for performing arts, ceramics, sculpture and other crafts.

A rough estimate puts the initial cost at $3 million to $4 million.

Such a centre would provide accommodation for approximately 2,400 students at any one time which would seem to promise a considerable boost to the economy of Victoria and surrounding areas in terms of rentals, food and clothing.

Moreover, the centre could become academically accredited and provide opportunity to acquire a degree in any art. Sound instruction in any aspect of the arts would be provided as well as instruction and facilities for those who are interested in any specific branch as a hobby or recreation.

Who knows? It could easily hush the wails for a "proper" Victoria auditorium that we hear so often.

'Too Many Supermarkets'

TORONTO (CP) — There are too many supermarkets in Canada in relation to the population, the president of Canada's largest supermarket chain told an annual meeting Monday.

T. G. McCormack, president of Dominion Stores Ltd. of Toronto, said: "Perhaps the enthusiasm and agrressiveness that are characteristic of effective competition can be carried too far with the result we find too many outlets competing for too few shoppers."

He told shareholders that the company opened 200 units and closed 148 during the past 10 years, leaving it with more than 400 stores.

"Every new store must be justified in advance on its anticipated return on investment," McCormack said.

He said the company must be more willing than in the past to remove itself from unprofitable and unpromising aspects of business.

McCormack said Dominion must share the blame for the condition of the food industry.

McCormack described results of the company's first-quarter as disappointing. A 16-per-cent sales increase from a year earlier, and a 23-per-cent profit decline, were reported last week.

During the three months ended June 14, profit dropped to $1.48 million or 18 cents a share, from $1.93 million or 23 cents a share last year.

McCormack said despite a $37 million increase in sales during the quarter, profit for the period was about equal to the 1964 period when sales were less than half the 1971 level.

He said that between 1961 and 1971 food prices rose 27.4 per cent in Canada while they increased 52 per cent in Britain and 31 per cent in the United States. During the period, food store wages in Canada increased 104 per cent while in the U.S. and Britain the increase was 70 per cent.

FURNES, Belgium (Reuter) — Baker Gabriel van Hauwermeiren and nine of his colleagues are claiming a world record for the biggest loaf of bread ever baked. Their loaf weighed 286 pounds and measured 12 feet long by four feet wide. Van Hauwermerien said the previous world record was held by a Turkish baker who produced a 198-pound loaf two years ago.

Contribution Made Before Actors Moved On

They Helped Victoria Theatre

By KRITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter
Last of Two Articles

Not all the people who have helped to win friends for Bastion Theatre, then gone on to wider fields in entertainment, had their stage start with this company.

Some already professionals, spent a season or more in Victoria contributing their talent to the growth of theatre here before going on.

Others were developing talent in different areas of entertainment, their stage experience limited to their specific talents. With Bastion (and this has happened with other Victoria groups) they discovered they could take parts in plays rather than just dancing or singing as the case might be.

Here, then, are the second and third groups of performers tabbed for these articles:

In the second group,

Marge Adelberg, Bastion's resident composer-playwright for the last six years, began her career as composer-pianist-musical director in Vancouver. She has composed a number of successful adaptations of fairy tales for children in addition to adult productions, and her work has been produced by groups in Prince George and in Denver, Colo.

Karen Austin is an Equity actress who spent a season with Bastion taking several major roles. Returning home to Alberta, she toured with Citadel Theatre as Saint Joan.

Stuart Baker is an Equity actor (stage name Stuart

Madeline Ponich
. . . went to England

Kent) who was co-founder with Thor Arngrim of Victoria's Totem Theatre a few years back. He has worked with the National Film Board, then succeeded Mannering as head of Manitoba Theatre Centre's school before coming to work with Bastion in a host of major roles. Now playing lead roles with Vancouver Playhouse, he was taken on as stand-in for Michael Sarrazin during Victoria filming of the movie Harry Never Holds.

Blain Fairman, once on staff of CKDA, starred in Bastion's first adult production, The School for Wives. Following other roles, he left to make the movie The Trap with Rita Tushingham. He now lives in England where his latest show was the musical Ambassador, with Howard Keel and Danielle Darrieux. Last spring he made Eskimo legends for BBC-TV.

Eugene Gallant, also Equity, came to Victoria with Les Jeunes Comediens as company manager, returned to act, direct and teach with Bastion in both studio and mainstage productions. He has now returned to his home in Moncton, N.B., to act and direct at the university.

Allen Hughes spent the 1968-69 season with Bastion in major roles, and is now working with youth theatre groups in Montreal.

Don McManus toured and acted extensively with Bastion, besides directing. He went to Charlottetown to play the father in Johnny Belinda, and has also worked with the Canadian Opera Company.

Of the young performers whose talents have been expanded through Bastion experience, the first five are Wynne Shaw dancers.

Paul Blakey's first acting role was in the Wizard of Oz. At the age of 17 he joined the Royal Winnipeg Ballet. Until recently he was associated with Ballet Horizons in Vancouver.

Madeline Ponich toured with Red Riding Hood, played Tiger Lily in Peter Pan. She went to England and joined the Covent Garden Opera Ballet. She danced with Fonteyne and Nreyev in Swan Lake with the Royal Ballet, and is now in her second season with the Opera Ballet Company, Linz, Austria.

Maureen Lawson (now Mrs. Larry Eastick) has danced in and choreographed many productions here, and was invited by Walter Burgess to be his assistant choreographer last summer in Winnipeg. She is now a graduate in threatre at UVic and teaching dancing at the Wynne Shaw studio.

Valerie Smith danced and acted in a number of productions, including Cinderella, The Red Shoes, Sinbad, Pied Piper. She auditioned successfully for Disney on Parade and now, in her second year with that company, is dancing the lead as Snow White.

Nancy Watt has danced and acted in both touring and mainstage productions, then went east to act with Neptune Theatre and in TV series and commercials in Toronto.

The four girls above joined Equity when they were selected by Walter Burgess to dance in Vancouver Festival's Rosalinda, which starred Cyril Ritchard.

Danny Costain, a champion Highland dancer, acted in Marge Adelberg's musical adaptation of The School for Wives. Later he was accepted by the Charlottetown Festival and has spent four years with that company and Les Feux Follets, both of which appeared at Expo 70 in Japan.

John Heath was a student in Manitoba who sought and obtained a role in Wizard of Oz here, then became a Bastion stalwart especially in costume design for children's shows, besides performing notably. He is now with a Victoria fabric shop.

Bill Hosie had been a nightclub performer, singer and comedian before joining Bastion. He played numerous lead roles on tour and mainstage, notably Lancelot in Camelot, Captain Hook in Peter Pan, Fagin in Oliver, the title role in The Pied Piper. He also is with Charlottetown and Les Feux Follets.

Wendy Packard was Bastion's first Alice in Wonderland at the old church, and grew up to be the scheming heiress in We Must Kill Toni. She acted in an choreographed Sleeping Beauty, and teaches dancing with Vivian Briggs.

Stewart Paul was a teacher in Dawson Creek who became co-founnder of Bastion with Mannering. During his years as business manager, production manager, stage manager and occasional actor, he was on leave of absence several times to stage manage at Manitoba Theatre Centre, Expo 67, and at the McPherson here. He went on in the same capacity to Disney on Parade.

Ross Petty spent a season acting with Bastion in five plays in lead roles, then went east to sing for a time in television. He is now in Paris, in musical comedy at the Lido.

Timothy Vernon, who had been in Amahl and the Night Visitors, played in Bastion's first School for Wives at the old church. Pursuing his career in music, he won highest honors at the Vienna State Academy.

Peter Williams is a well-known Victoria pianist-composer, involved in many mainstage, children's and touring shows and with the famous Smile Show. He is now composing original music for Bastion Studio Company productions.

All this, it must be remembered, is only one phase of Victoria talent and how it grows. There are scores more.

Message from Mel Couvelier

Just for the record, I would like to state that I got the idea for writing this column from Allan McEachern who won Oak Bay in 1963 and later was appointed to the Bench. Allan said the columns were a good way of getting his views to the electorate and I am convinced he is right.

Two recent events have fired interest in the probable successor to Premier Bennett and again have brought up the question of his age. A Socred candidate exploded with a statement to the effect that Phil Gaglardi didn't have quotes a snowball's chance in hell of becoming Premier of B.C. end of quotes.

It was Mr. Bennett himself who brought up the question of his age by proclaiming recently that since he doesn't drink and doesn't smoke that he is really only 40 years of age. That raises the question of is a man as old as he feels or only as old as his arteries.

More seriously it does suggest that there might be some justification for men in public office submitting to regular physical examinations. During the recent Eagleton-McGovern crisis, it was obvious that had the former nominee for vice-president made known his full medical history that he would probably not have been chosen. The health of the President and the Vice-President is of vital concern to the people of the U.S.

So far as physical fitness is concerned in the case of Mr. Bennett this could be determined by taking a complete examination and having his doctors submit an authentic report on his condition.

So far as Mr. Gaglardi becoming Premier in place of Mr. Bennett, I find with many people in Oak Bay who have expressed alarm at the prospect. Any man who announces that there is to Christian virtue seems to have his values [illegible] Governments, including Mr. Bennett's, generally favor compulsory retirement at age 65. I have expressed myself as favoring reduction of the retirement age to 60. Mr. Bennett is now well past this figure at age 72 next month and if he wins the election could be in office until he is 77 years of age, more than double the age of some other provincial premiers.

I would like to talk to you. Phone, write or drop into our headquarters, 1933 Oak Bay Ave., telephone 592-2478.

MEL COUVELIER

Soviets Putting Canada on Map

MONTREAL (CP) — A map of Canada described as one of the most technically superior ever produced will be released within the next two years, but will be made in Hungary.

The map will be part of a world mapping project launched in the late 1950s by the U.S.S.R. under the direction of Prof. Sandor Rado, one of the world's leading cartographers.

They will also be the first series of world maps containing standardized editorial principles.

Rado, president of the national office of lands and mapping of the Hungarian Peoples Republic, said Hungary is in charge of producing the Canadian and North American sections of the world atlas.

Trevor Lloyd, professor of georgraphy at McGill University, said the Canadian map will be superior to any previous production.

Giant Frogs 'Tasty'

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — A new species of giant frog, discovered on the floor of Lake Titicaca by a French scientific mission, has been pronounced "very tasty" by 80 per cent of persons selected to test an experimental canning, the state development agency (CBF) reported Monday.

CBF did not say what the other 20 per cent pronounced.

The French mission, which investigated the floor of the lake under agreements with the Bolivian and Peruvian governments, found the hitherto unknown frog by the thousands, CBF said.

AL BAILEY SAYS:
"FROZEN MEATS CAN BE COOKED WITHOUT THAWING" HOWEVER—
To ensure uniformity of doneness through the meat — to avoid over-cooking the outside before the inside is done — additional cooking time is required — along with a low, low temperature. Approximately 12 to 15 minutes per pound for small cuts and 20 to 25 minutes per pound for larger cuts should be added to the regular cooking time at a temperature of 275 degrees F.

Congratulations to L. M. REED, 1147 Quadra, winner of our weekly free 25-lb. freezer pack.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN
World Champions

Any declarer knows how much high-card strength is massed against him. But only a winning declarer is able to determine which opponent has which cards.

Today's interesting game hand gives the careful declarer a chance to shine while the careless declarer will go down in defeat.

Vulnerable: None
Dealer: West

NORTH
♠ K 7 3
♥ 8 6 3
♦ Q 10 6 4
♣ K Q 6

WEST

SOUTH

♦ A 7
♣ A J 10 8 5 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♣
1 ♥	2 ♣	2 ♥	2 ♠
Pass	4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of hearts.

North would have liked to have been able to bid two and one-quarter clubs over one heart but contented himself with a mere competitive raise. When South bid two spades, North justifiably promoted the value of his black-suit honors and jumped to four clubs. South then bid game.

After the lead of the heart king and ace the careless declarer ruffs and draws trumps. He then banks all on the spades. Naturally, he goes down when spades prove 4-2 and it is too late to make a diamond play.

The less careless declarer ruffs West's second heart lead and also draws trumps. He sees the necessity for a diamond play to cater to the probable loss of a spade trick. Accordingly, he plays the ace and another diamond, and when West follows low, he goes up with the queen and he also loses the hand. He excuses himself with "West bid, so I played him for the diamond king."

The careful and winning declarer needs no excuses. After ruffing the second high heart and drawing trumps, he notes that East discards two hearts to protect both diamonds and spades. Declarer now correctly places the three top heart honors with West and reasons that if West had also held the diamond king, he would have undoubtedly opened the bidding.

After these deductions, the winning play is apparent. The diamond ace and a diamond to dummy's ten drives out East's king. The diamond queen is now available to discard declarer's fourth spade.

Recognizing the need to play diamonds before spades is not enough. The successful declarer must also correlate the play with the bidding to make the winning decision.

Pipeline Hearing All Over

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three months of testimony completed an 6,800 pages of evidence compiled, the public inquiry into schemes to pipe natural gas to Vancouver Island closed Tuesday with a verbal battle among counsel for the applicants.

B. V. Massie, counsel for Malaspina Gas Pipelines Ltd., questioned whether B.C. Hydro's application was sincere or if the public utility had simply been trying to stop anybody else from gaining approval for a pipeline.

Massie made the allegation to the Public Utilities Commission which has been set the task of deciding between Hydro, Malaspina and three other applicants as to who shall be awarded a certificate of public convenience and necessity.

He said Hydro could, on its own initiative have begun piping gas to the Island at any time prior to 1971 when the provincial government called for bids on a transmission system serving both the Island and Powell River.

Road Move Appealed By Duncan

DUNCAN — City council learned Monday night that the provincial highways department intends to reclassify Trunk Road and Government Street as a secondary highway. Now the two thourough-fares are arterial highways paid for by the provincial government and council wants to keep it that way otherwise costs will become shareable between the city and the provincial department of highways.

Council will seek an interview with the highways minister to discuss the matter. The highways department advised Duncan "because these streets no longer form part of the main provincial highway network and the bulk of traffic using the streets is travelling to and, or from points within the city, arterial classification of the route is no longer justified."

Ald. Ken Paskin said it should not be allowed to have "the roads dumped on us." Ald. Hamish Mutter thought the city should first conduct its own traffic counts before presenting any argument and Ald. Allan Kerr suggested the city should at least try to reach a better sharing basis with the highways department.

Mayor Jim Quaife received his council's endorsation of a courteous driver program under which meritorious drivers will receive a special bonus. It will start Sept. 1. Each month a driver will be selected by a special committee.

The bonus will be a letter, tickets for a restaurant or a theatre. The RCMP will conduct the program. Quaife said "this program will be unique in B.C. and may be even in Canada."

In other business council: learned that during July social assistance in the city amounted to $13,815; decided to arrange a joint meeting with North Cowichan to hear the swimming pool report; was advised that during the past month 78,791,700 gallons of water were pumped for the city's water system which is an incrdase of 7,233,700 gallons over the same month last year, and referred to the streets committee a request for better traffic controls at Craig and Government streets.

Boxing Club Earns Title

Jim Walshaw scored six goals for the Boxers, who produced a nine-goal burst in the final period after leading, 5-3, at the end of the first period and 10-4 after the second.

Boxing Club now plays North Shore Olympics of North Vancouver in a two-game, total-goal Pacific Coast Senior "C" final in Victoria this weekend. Location and times are still to be decided.

Holiday Blues

Seems to me a really keen gardener goes off on summer vacation with somewhat mixed feelings. He is anxious to get away with his family for a change of scene and/some relaxation, but at the same time he dreads the sorry spectacle of neglect that will await him in his garden upon his return.

High winds and heavy rains can make a shambles of the garden, especially when staking has been inadequate, but it is surprising how quickly a garden can be brought back to normal after a holiday absence, especially if a little intelligent conditioning was given the garden before leaving.

One of the more urgent jobs will be staking and tying the plants which have put on height in your absence, and the removal of faded flowers from both annual and perennial plants.

The lawn will need some early attention also. If it has become something of a hayfield through lack of mowing, it is best to reduce the height of the grass in several stages rather than whittling it down to a close-mown state straight away.

Most of the modern rotary power mowers can be adjusted to cut very high indeed, and they should be set up to their highest notch for the first cut. Mow again one notch lower every second day until the lawn is back to normal.

Not many of the reel-type mowers are capable of such wide adjustment. If you can't adjust yours high enough, a little extra height can be gained by winding a rope around the back roller to increase its diameter.

The mowings will have to be bagged or raked up, of course, for they will be too thick and too heavy to leave on the lawn. An easy way to dispose of them is to use them as a mulch, spreading them thickly on the bare soil between flowering plants and shrubs and between the vegetable rows. The mulch will insulate the soil surface from the sun, conserving soil moisture and keeping down weeds, and when turned under during the fall digging or rototilling, they will add a bit of much-needed organic matter to the soil.

The lawn and flower beds will probably be as dry as the proverbial bone upon your return from vacation, and it isn't easy to get water to penetrate into extremely dry soil, for it tends to run off raher than sinking in. A fine, misty spray is better than coarse droplets here, but if your sprinkler won't produce this type of discharge, wet the surface lightly, then move on to another part of the garden, coming back from time to time to apply a little more water. Never give more at any one sprinkling than will sink in readily. Once the surface is moistened to a depth of about an inch, penetration will be much easier.

Weeds are always a problem to the returning vacationer, for they seem to be waiting until we turn our backs to come popping out of the ground in horrid profusion, and it is VERY important to deal with them before they can set and shed their infernal seeds. Old Country gardeners have a saying that goes: "One year's seeding — seven years' weeding," and unfortunately, it is only too true.

We have a whole host of miracle chemicals nowadays for dealing with weeds, but they all cost money and there is always some danger in using them near valued plants. I have written before about burning off weeds by spraying them with a strong overdose of fertilizer, a very good and fairly safe method where there is a lot of weedy ground to be covered, but for the average backyard plot, it is pretty hard to beat a good sharp Dutch hoe, or one of the modern crescent-shaped Tru-Temper hoes, just scuffling the weeds off slightly below the soil surface.

Vhtnng Finds Peace

It was in the 43rd year of the lightning campaign to wipe the dread Viet Narian guerrillas out of West Vhtnnng. The American Bombs for Peace Program was proving a smashing success.

In order to force the recalcitrant East Vhtnnngians to talk peace, Americans had been dropping bombs on their heads. In fact, they had dropped 8.3 tons of bombs on the heads of every East Vhtnnngian man, woman and child.

But for some reason, instead of making them think peaceful thoughts, this only made them angry. In fact, they weren't even speaking to Americans any more.

★ ★ ★

This strange silence from East Vhtnnng puzzled the U.S. ambassador, Henry Cabbage. "If bombs won't create peace," he said, scratching his head, "what will?"

So he called up the beloved premier of West Vhtnnng, General Hoo Dat Don Dar. "I-am-for-peace - democracy-and-another - billion-bucks-hello?" said General Hoo.

"General," said the ambassador, "there is a strange silence in East Vhtnnng. It's so quiet you can hardly hear our bombs drop."

"Good," said General Hoo. "They've been talking too much."

"I would respectfully suggest you select your most loyal and trusted adviser and parachute him in to East Vhtnnng, if you think it's a good idea," said the ambassador politely, "or I'll cut off your allowance."

★ ★ ★

So General Hoo's most trusted and loyal adviser, Kris Ma Phut, bravely volunteered for the dangerous mission, after delicately pushing the muzzle of General Hoo's pistol away from his temple.

A week later, by pre-arrangement, he was picked up at midnight from the summit of East Vhtnnng's highest mountain, Mount Opp Ngo.

Waiting eagerly aboard the helicopter for his top-secret report were General Hoo, the U.S. ambassador and General Zip K. Zapp, head of the Bombs for Peace Program.

"I have glorious news," said the exhausted spy, Kris Ma Phut, as the helicopter soared skyward. "The reason East Vhtnnng has been so strangely silent is that there's nothing left alive down there but three cockroaches. And they won't talk."

★ ★ ★

General Zapp triumphantly slapped his thigh. "I always knew that by dropping 8.3 tons of bombs on each of their heads, we could bring them the blessings of peace."

"Eternally," agreed Kris Ma Phut. "Wait till the world hears the war is over. I can't wait to tell."

There was a moment of silence. "Of course, with the war over," said General Hoo thoughtfully, "there goes my billion bucks allowance."

"Of course, with the war over," said General Zapp thoughtfully, "who are our fine boys in our fine bombers going to bomb?"

"Good heavens!" said the U.S. ambassador. "It wasn't supposed to end until a week before election day."

The three leaders looked at each other then looked at Kris Ma Phut, standing beamingly by the open hatch. There was a brief moment of struggle and the helicopter lifted slightly, as though relieved of a heavy burden, before sailing on into the night.

And so the Bombs for Peace Program continues to be a smashing success night and day in making people happy. It makes General Hoo happy. It makes General Zapp happy. It makes the American ambassador happy. It makes everybody happy.

Except maybe those three cockroaches.

Marriage Old Hat

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — Marriage as an institution seems to be dying in Hollywood. Actors and actresses traditionally have always been liberal about the marriage vow and, of course, famous for divorce. Things are much worse. Nowadays it seems that the only happy unions in town are really those who aren't married at all — just living together.

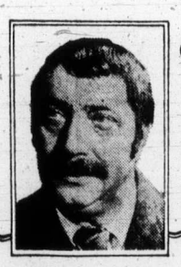

Actor Richard Johnson, once married to glamorous Kim Novak, now admits freely: "Kim and I should have kept it as lovers. She's no more the marrying kind than I am. It was terrific fun while it lasted, but we should never have married. We're still good friends and last year went skiing together a couple of times. I have become selfish in my old age. I enjoy being free and marriage implies not being able to do what you want to do at the appropriate time. Another thing: My main acquaintances naturaly are young actresses and I detect that a ot of them don't want to be married these days."

Johnson's remarks are typical of the ones I hear every day from young actors and actresses living together. Many of them, like young Barbara Hershey Seagull and David Carradine, are expecting babies. Juliet Prowse had a baby boy born an hour before her scheduled wedding ceremony to her common-law husband John McCook. The wedding will be postponed until Juliet gets on to the hand of changing diapers. Michael Sarrazin and Jacqueline Bisset have moved from the free love area of Malibu to staid,proper Beverly Hills, one of the last bastions of movieland marriages. But they still have no plans for marriage.

Michelle Trivola Marvin is taking her unique lawsuit against Lee Marvin to the appellate court. She lived five years with Marvin and then he married another. She sued him, contending that she was entitled to the same type of alimony and property settlement as anyone who had ever signed a marriage contract. Attorney Marvin Mitchelson vows he will take the case to the U.S. supreme court.

What is behind the decline of the marriage state in Hollywood? Most blame it on runaway production, just as runaway production is blamed for most ills of the movie industry. The husband goes on a six months location in Europe; the wife stays home because they want their children in the Beverly Hills schools. In the old days, the husband did his philandering in the dressing room during camera set-ups, but he usually came home for supper. But six months away from home is a long time and love affairs instead of matinee performances often result.

Seeing Can Deceive

The closer you are to an event, the more subjective it becomes. You cannot see it clearly, because it is too close to you.

But people forget this when they read newspaper accounts to events in which they have been involved. "That's not the way it was at all," they say. "I was there, and it happened quite differently."

Even trained newspapermen are trapped by this psychological mirage. The recent A. J. Liebling conference on new journalism in New York reminded me of my disillusionment in this connection.

I had always admired Liebling's pieces in the New Yorker magazine. His articles from France seemed masterpieces of perception, accuracy and objectivity.

Then he went to Chicago to write a series about the city. I met him there a few times, and helped him with some sources.

When the articles appeared (and were later published in book form as Second City), I was astonished that he had so misviewed and misjudged the city.

I had known Chicago all my life, and he had been here only a few weeks. His opinions seemed willfully wrong to me: petty and petulant, biased and ignorant and smart-alecky.

I could agree with some general conclusions, but his perspective seemed all wrong.

Yet, who is to say which of us had the more "realistic" view of the city? It may be that time will prove him right and will show that I was too involved in the environment to be able to see it clearly.

★ ★ ★

If you are in an accident, you do not see it the same way as the spectators do, or the police, or the ambulance-drivers.

Whole parts of it may elude you, while other parts loom up out of proportion to the rest.

The bride in a marriage, the husband in a divorce, do not view these events the same way as the minister and guests, the judge and the lawyers.

Being the central character in an event does not qualify you do be the most accurate witness; often, quite the contrary.

It is the coach on the sidelines who has a truer view of the football game than the players in the scrimmage; and sometimes even the spectators watching it on TV can see what nobody in the stadium has observed.

Journalistic accounts of events are sometimes distorted because of ignorance, sloppiness, incompetence, or unconscious bias.

But, more often, when we disagree with the report of an event we have been close to, it is less a matter of the reporter's deficiency than of our own foreshortened perspective.

You can't see the picture when you are in the frame.

DAVID ANDERSON FOR PREMIER

JOBS

1. Mobilize the Department of Industrial Development, Trade and Commerce and the private sector in the '70's to expand secondary industry and increase jobs.
2. Focus emphasis on job expanding secondary industry.
3. A co-ordinated program to help people, new to the work force, to develop job skills.
4. More processing of our raw materials in the province to provide more secondary industry basic to B.C.

SECONDARY INDUSTRY

5. Establish a major incentive program with a $100,000,000 fund to expand existing secondary industries and bring new industry to B.C.
6. Work closely with communities throughout B.C. to determine what types of industry will be most acceptable in each area.
7. Expand export trade with Pacific rim countries.
8. Encourage companies in Pacific rim countries who are seeking distribution in North America to establish branch plants in B.C.

LABOUR-MANAGEMENT RELATIONS

In the last report on days lost through strikes (May 1972) there were over a million days lost in Canada. Over 700,000 of these were lost in British Columbia. This has to stop. The Anderson government, rather than leaning in the direction of big labour or big business, will work on behalf of people.

9. Abolish the Mediation Commission. Replace it with arbitrators acceptable to both union and management.
10. Set up an Industrial Council with representatives from labour, management and the government to work for better understanding and to propose cooperative approaches for problems as they arise, and to anticipate them before they arise.
11. Encourage the automatic cost-of-living clause in contracts.
12. Introduce proper negotiating procedures for the public service.

THE ENVIRONMENT

David Anderson has a proud record of achievement as the leading figure in B.C.'s political life to work for the protection of our environment. Preservation of the environment is not incompatible with the preservation of jobs. In fact, environmental concerns will open up entirely new fields, products and processes and with them job opportunities.

13. Create a Department of the Environment. Give the Minister the major voice in the control of pollution and the protection of the environment.
14. Establish a clearing house for information relating to environmental problems.
15. Make available to the public the research obtained by the information clearing house.
16. Keep the Skagit Valley for permanent recreation and park land.
17. Enact an environmental policy act to guarantee full studies of potential environmental damage before any construction work can be undertaken.
18. Enforce green strip legislation to preserve vegetation beside streams and rivers.
19. Provide the fish and game branch with an adequate budget to carry out enforcement of regulations and scientific research.

THE ELDERLY

20. Through Provincial supplements to Federal Pensions we will guarantee a monthly income, fixed to the cost of living for all persons sixty-five years and over. This amount will not be below $200 per month.
21. All medicines prescribed by a physician will be available at no charge. Likewise, all medical appliances and other essential aids will be provided at no charge.
22. All hospital services, acute care, extended care, intermediate or chronic care will be provided at the standard B.C. Hospital Insurance fee.
23. A Provincially financed housing programme designed to increase the number of homes and apartments for the elderly. Defer municipal home taxation until the home is sold.
24. Free passes on B.C. Hydro busses.
25. In co-operation with the Federal Government, local community offices will be established to ensure all those sixty-five years and over obtain all their entitled benefits.

HEALTH AND MEDICAL SERVICES

Health and medical services are amongst the more important basic services required by the entire population.

26. We will have to work with, rather than against, our doctors if we are to expand and improve our medical services.
27. The Anderson government will be sensitive to these needs and already has a program drawn up which will greatly expand these services.
28. Cancel the involvement of four separate ministers (Health and Hospital Insurance, Welfare, Labour and the Provincial Secretary) and place financial responsibility in the hands of one person, the Minister of Health.
29. Establish "satellite clinics" linked to major hospitals to provide emergency services and public health care.
30. Include dental care for those below the poverty income levels.
31. Double the support for the U.B.C. Medical School and increase continuing medical education.
32. Train para-medical personnel and physicians' assistants.

YOUTH

The future of our province will be in the hands of the youth of today. Yet, so many of them have never had a job. Not even a summer job.

33. Re-examine our concepts of what the role of the modern school should be in the society of today and tomorrow.
34. Develop a sports and physical fitness program in co-operation with communities everywhere in the province.
35. Require that all secondary schools, junior colleges and universities provide a comprehensive job search training program.
36. Involve the youth of the province in the organizational work, planning and implementation of the new Department of the Environment because it will have a direct bearing on their lives as citizens of the province.

EDUCATION

In this competitive world, we cannot allow B.C.'s educational system to fall behind the rest of the world. We must all be involved in the educational process—the student, the parent, the teacher.

37. Remove all costs of education from taxes on residential and farm lands and finance through general revenues.
38. Repeal Bill 3 and restore bargaining rights with local school boards. Finance 60% of the operating costs of independent schools which meet provincial standards, with the proviso that the provincial government would not contribute to studies outside the accepted provincial curriculum.
39. Reduce the size of classes, to at least the national average, and finance the hiring of teachers aids to give the individual needed help.
40. Require that counsellors and other teaching specialists be properly trained and qualified in their specialities.
41. Develop educational television including post-secondary programs for adults. Finance community colleges out of general revenues.
42. Use school facilities for community activities.
43. Encourage communities to become actively involved in the program and the services of each school.
44. Supply special help needed for the education of the handicapped.
45. All high school students seeking a drivers license shall complete a driver training program to be offered by the high schools.

HOUSING

Housing is a major "people" problem. Efforts must be made to make neighbourhoods more livable and to develop better integrated communities.

46. Co-operate with federal government on a vastly expanded building program of housing units within cities and the renovation of existing units.
47. Develop complete communities or towns at new locations instead of uncontrolled urban sprawl.
48. Establish a "Renter's Grant" in an amount equal to the Home Owner's Grant on any residential unit after one year in that dwelling.

PEOPLE POLICIES

49. Increase consumer protection legislation, especially in the areas of pyramid selling, warranties and home repairs, and hire the staff needed to enforce the laws.
50. Repeal the ban on liquor and tobacco advertising. It is bad legislation which has not worked and thus makes a mockery of the law, discriminating against B.C. publications.
51. Allow beer and wine to be sold in grocery stores.
52. Permit the development of neighbourhood pubs.
53. Provide legal aid to all persons unable to afford it.
54. Provide day care centers and homemaker services, through assistance to communities.
55. To reduce welfare rolls — provide increased vocational training and programs to encourage the unemployed to develop better job search skills.

STATUS OF WOMEN

While there has been much talk about improving the status of women, particularly in the work situation, little has been accomplished in B.C. The Anderson government has plans for specific improvements.

56. Ensure that women have equal rights with men in education including universities, vocational, technical and professional schools.
57. Guarantee that equal pay legislation in B.C. will be enforced so that skill, effort and responsibility will be the objective criteria in determining what is equal work.
58. Increase the number of women on provincial boards, commissions, corporations councils, advisory committees and task forces.
59. Ensure that provincial protective labour legislation be applicable to both sexes.

LEISURE TIME AND RECREATION

The increased leisure time of the future will require that new recreational facilities be constructed immediately.

60. There must be more campsites and picnic areas and provincial parks within easy weekend access of the heavily-populated areas patrolled and staffed by qualified park rangers.
61. Provide more adventure playgrounds for children.
63. Encourage the development of low-cost ski areas close to the centers of population.
64. Support and encourage local agencies and organizations that provide summer camps for both young and old.
65. Support community recreational programs and the development of local recreational facilities.

INDIAN AFFAIRS

David Anderson has said, "It's all on the books. We don't have to introduce new legislation to improve the lot of our native peoples, merely extend to them the legislation which is there already, as we do for everyone else.

66. This means making the same services available to Indians as to other citizens of this province.
"Indians know all the areas where our provincial government has discriminated against them . . . they have repeatedly told us what they want and why.
They don't expect another Royal Commission to investigate the needs they have spelled out to us ten thousand times.
67. "We will end government discrimination against Indians."

FARM POLICY

The Anderson government will preserve agriculture as one of our fundamental industries, we must preserve the B.C. Farmland.

68. The government will establish an Agricultural Lands Trust to pay farmers fair market value for their land to preserve farm lands from ill considered land speculation and development.
69. Make the produce of B.C. farms competitive at home with the produce from other countries and to expand the export potential for farm produce.
70. Consult closely with the farming community on the marketing of agricultural products with special emphasis on securing international markets.
71. Increase expenditures through the U.B.C. Department of Agriculture and on the Provincial Department of Agriculture to provide broader services requested by the farming community.
72. Increase provincial government assistance to farmer co-ops to ensure efficient management of farm based resources.
73. Remove school taxes from farm lands and potential farm lands.

TAXES AND YOUR GOVERNMENT

Government must be made more visible in its actions and more responsive to public scrutiny.

74. Reform the provincial legislature to include a full Hansard and a question period. Permit T.V. and radio coverage of debates.
75. Introduce modern management techniques at all levels of government.
76. Appoint an Auditor General to tell the public where public funds are going.
78. Institute a Productivity and Prices Council for B.C. to report regularly to both the government and the public and to make specific recommendations for more efficient production and distribution.
79. Enforce compulsory automobile insurance legislation by requiring that motorists produce proof of insurance at the time of obtaining their license plates. If they cannot produce such proof they will be required to purchase insurance from the government with their plates. The government will strive to protect the private sector but will insist on compliance with the law for the protection of all.
80. Allow individuals the right to take legal action against the government.
81. Introduce improved and fair expropriation and compensation laws to provide for the right of appeal.

TRANSPORTATION

There is a remarkable fiction abroad that B.C. has adequate roads. It is far from the truth.
The Anderson government will place great emphasis on cooperation with municipalities on mass transportation, rapid transit facilities and the upgrading of the provincial road system... Immediately.

ROADS

82. Develop the shorter route to the Cariboo - Chilcotin area by improving the road through Squamish and by completing the Pemberton - Lillooet section.
83. Improve the Hope - Princeton and Southern trans-provincial highways.
84. Give immediate priority to solving the highway bottleneck at Hope.
85. Consult with regional authorities to establish other highway priorities.

FERRIES

86. Increase the number of ferries and extend the hours of service.
88. Improve restaurant facilities at all ferry terminals.

BUS TRANSPORTATION

89. Assist municipalities and regional districts to provide fast, convenient public transportation to meet the needs of local communities and to offer an attractive alternative to the use of the private automobile.

AIR TRANSPORTATION

90. Cooperate with the federal government to develop transportation links needed in northern areas.

CONSUMER PROTECTION

David Anderson sees the need to restore public confidence in government management on behalf of the people. His government will immediately implement unused standing legislation on consumer protection.

91. Set safety standards for the commercial sale of used cars.
92. Enforce full disclosure of interest rates on all consumer credit.
93. Regulate promotional gimmickry to ensure that advertising really conforms to existing legislation.
94. Require full disclosure to all who want the information, including the party concerned, by credit reporting agencies, and ensure individual rights of privacy.
95. Implement existing legislation on uniform standards for labelling merchandise.

NORTHERN DEVELOPMENT

It has been said that Canada's future lies in the north, but so far B.C.'s development has been sporadic and unco-ordinated. The Anderson government will open up the north.

96. Appoint a Minister for Northern Development.
97. Work to expand present Northern communications and increase the number of industries in the north through incentive programs.
98. Improve existing port facilities and in conjunction with the federal government, plan for new ports so that the north can ship directly to world markets and exploit cost savings.
100. Establish a flying ambulance service to serve the whole of the Province.

We can have prosperity plus a better, more fulfilling life for all in British Columbia, if we get together and work together.

Bennett Promises Local Rally:

Late Night Ferry Will Get Trial Now

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

A late night ferry will be launched on a service between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen on a trail basis before the Aug. 30 provincial election, Premier Bennett told an overflow crowd of 850 to 900 at Victoria high school Tuesday

Smiling broadly and gesturing with both hands, he appeared to welcome the shouts of the hecklers at first and provided some telling punch lines of his own. But later, his trademark smile shrank and his replies lost much of their edge.

;when it was all over he was escorted quickly through a heavy rain by public relations man Bill Clancey and others to a waiting limousine, where he declined to answer questions from reporters about the ferry service.

Bennett asked the reporters to see him today.

"He was soaking wet," said Clancey of the premier, who was perspiring after his address on behalf of Social Credit candidates in the Greater Victoria ridings. "We didn't want him getting cold in that rain."

During his speech, which also drew noisy bursts of approval from his supporters, Bennett offered a piece of cheery news for old-age pensioners.

Referring to his Kelowna Charter, he said the increase to the pension supplement would bring the pension and supplements to "considerably more" than $200 a month. He offered no definite figure.

He said it was obvious 99 per cent of the people at the meeting were friends and 1 per cent, enemies.

"The reason they came to our meeting is that they can't hold one of their own," he said. "They can't find a telephone booth small enough."

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Heavily-armed leftist guerrillas and escaped convicts seized a small Argentine airport Tuesday night and 10 of them hijacked a jetliner to this Chilean capital, police reported.

The hijackers took over the plane at Trelew, a small city in south central Argentina. After stopping for fuel at Puerto Montt just across the Chilean border, they ordered the pilot to Santiago, where the plane landed shortly after 8 p.m. PDT. It carried 90 passengers and six crew members.

One person was shot dead and several persons were wounded in a breakout from Rawson penal colony near Trelew that preceded the hijacking.

Troops and police surrounded the Trelew airport terminal, where 19 terrorists and convicts were reported holding eight airline employees hostage. The police also

B.C. Pension Barrett Plan

Retirement at Age 55 Possible, NDP States

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

CAMPBELL RIVER — NDP leader Dave Barrett announced here Tuesday night an NDP government would introduce a voluntary provincial plan paying benefits based on the profits of investments in new B.C. industry.

He told a packed audience of more than 250 in the Legion Hall that the aims of the plan were twofold: To permit B.C. citizens to participate in the development of the province through their own investments and to allow those who wish to retire as early as age 55 to do so.

The proposed B.C. Pension Plan, Barrett said, would be tied to a B.C. Industrial Development Corporation. He said an NDP government would put "tens of millions of dollars" into the corporation initially and would supplement this investment with premiums from the new provincial pension plan.

● Food price battle pledged. Page 17

"The pension plan will be portable within the province enabling participants to carry their contribtions from job to job within the province," he said. "And anyone leaving B.C. can withdraw his savings from the plan at prevailing interest rates.

Benefits To Increase

"Furthermore, the pension benefits would increase in relation to the profits made by the industrial development corporation. So the more successful the corporation is, the higher the pension payments will be."

The NDP leader said voluntary participation under the plan would be within set limits of a minimum of 3 per cent and a maximum of 6 per cent of the income of any B.C. resident.

"Why shouldn't someone who feels that way be able to retire comfortable at age 55?" Barrett said. "I know a lot of people who would make darn good hippies at 55 because they have the experience to enjoy it."

"Let the young people go to work and not go on the wel-

U.K. Crisis Continues

Dockers Move on Small Ports

LONDON (Reuter) — Hundreds of striking dockworkers moved out of London Tuesday to reinforce picket lines at small ports which have been defying the 19-day-old national stoppage.

The dockers set off in busloads in the early-morning hours, their destinations being kept secret until the last moment.

Two of their main targets turned out to be Colchester and Richborough, both a few hours' drive from London.

The picketing operation was mounted at a time when hopes were rising that the strike, which has closed all the country's major ports and reduced its trade to a trickle, might end this weekend.

The crucial decision will be made today at a docks delegation conference, the only body empowered to order a return to work.

The conference was called by Jack Jones, leader of the Transport and General Workers' Union, after lengthy bargaining with port employers.

The strikers are demanding that registered longshoremen paid at the regular waterfront rate should be hired in the growing number of container packing depots which now perform much of the work that used to be done on the dockside.

Also, they want to stop the smaller ports, like Colchester, aking on non-registered dockers at lower pay rates. These non-registered dockers are defying the strike.

Container firms have been reluctant to replace their own hands with higher priced labor from the docks. But Jones secured from port employers an agreement which he hopes will gain acceptance from the strikers.

Kissinger and Tho Head for Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and the North Vietnamese he has been meeting with secretly in Paris, Le Duc Tho, are heading for South and North -Vietnam respectively.

The White House announced Tuesday that Kissinger is flying to Saigon for two days of talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu on the Vietnam war and negotiations for peace.

In Paris, a spokesman for the Viet Cong peace delegation confirmed that Le Duc Tho will leave Wednesday for Hanoi. He acts as special adviser to the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris.

The spokesman, Ly Van Sau, would make no further comment on Tho's trip but observers in Paris immediately connected it with Kissinger's mission and with the future of Thieu.

Nicholson Retiring, Successor Sought

British Columbia may have a new lieutenant-governor before many weeks are out.

B.C. government sources indicated to the Colonist Tuesday that Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, 71, will ask Prime Minister Trudeau to name a successor before his normal term runs out.

Nicholson, however, said that he had "no comment" to make on the matter.

Nicholson was appointed to the office in June, 1968 and the custom in Canada has been a term of five years.

Informants say Nicholson will retire for reasons of health and that consultations between Bennett and Trudeau will soon be arranged to consider Nicholson's successor.

In January, Nicholson collapsed at a dinner party at Government House but was released after a short stay in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Go-Ahead for Trans-Alaska Pipeline

No Crumb for Conservationists

WASHINGTON (CP) — A federal judge gave his go-ahead Tuesday to the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline project, acknowledging that the United States supreme court will make the final decision but dismissing all of the legal objections raised by opponents of the $3-billion project.

Judge George Hart, whose district court has been the scene of sporadic legal battles over the pipline for the last 28 months, gave not a single crumb of comfort to the American and Canadian conservationists in his brief oral judgment.

John Dienelt, one of the lawyers for the pipeline opponents, said they expect to begin the appeal process by next Monday with a motion to the U.S. court of appeal.

Judge Hart declined to issue a temporary order stopping Interior Secretary Rogers Morton from issuing the necessary construction permits until appeals are heard.

Instead, he accepted a pledge from lawyers for the interior department and Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. that "no construction of any kind"will go forward until the appeals are decided. Alyeska also promised to give the conservationists 30 days' notice of any change.

Judge Hart said that since it "can be confidently anticipated that the final decision rests with the supreme court," he would not delay the legal process further by giving detailed findings or reasons for his judgment.

He then announced his decision that

● The interior department had complied reasonably with all requirements of the U.S. environmental protection law, and

● Various land-use permits awarded to Alyeska for its pipeline are authorized by law.

Anderson Pledges Public Funds To Fight Coast Tanker Route

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public funds would go into the legal battle against a trans-Alaskan oil pipeline and West Coast tanker route if he were to form a provincial government on Aug. 30, British Columbia Liberal leader David Anderson said Tuesday.

At a news conference following his appearance as a witness in a court case in Washington, D.C., regarding the pipeline, Anderson said the provincial government, with the consent of the legislature, could hire lawyers to represent B.C. interests in the suit.

Quaife presents award to Tothill

DUNCAN — Centennial Plaza was the scene of a rare community effort recently as 11 Duncan firms, along with Cowichan Community Cablevision crews produced an hour-long fashion show attracting hundreds of visitors and residents to the sun-splashed square.

The most ambitious cablevision project to date, the fashion show was a co-ordinated effort involving jewellers, clothiers, hair stylists, and other Duncan businesses.

Duncay Mayor Jim Quaife was also on hand to present TV co-ordinator Jev Tothill with a certificate of Merit for the award-winning production of Kyeesack, a Cowichan Indian legend.

"We normally present such a certificate to people who have made what we feel is a valuable contribution to the city," Quaife said. "In this case, the city feels the time and effort put into Kyeesack by Able Joe, producer Ken Fought, and Jev Tothill, deserves recognition."

Development Controls

Cowichan District Wants Co-ordinator

DUNCAN — In a realization of the importance of proper land use controls the Cowichan Valley regional district has agreed to engage the services of a development co-ordinator.

Chairman Trevor Daniels said Monday the new staff member will have planning qualifications.

Other aspects of the new development co-ordinator's job will be to educate the advisory planning commissions on land use matters and to co-ordinate the commissions' efforts to get an overall plan. Daniels said passage of the zoning bylaw in May and the building bylaw a bit later in his Cowichan Bay area created interest for planning in other areas of the regional district.

While the first three readings of subdivision bylaws were given recently for the Cowichan Bay area and the North Oyster area a subdivision bylaw is now being prepared for the Mill Bay area. A recent meeting at Mill Bay where out of about 100 people only two persons voted against the reparation of such bylaw prompted director Ralph Keir to ask the board to go ahead.

The other areas in the Cowichan regional district also have expressed great interest in having land use controls introduced. Referring to the regional subdivision bylaw, Daniels said "the bylaw is only the provincial regulation word for word except for the lot sizes and instead of three we have more lot sizes. In the Cowichan Bay sub-division bylaw there is also a special provision to cover sewer regulations."

Daniels said the planning branch of the department of municipal affairs prepared "a beautiful and comprehensive" plan for the region which shows resources, ownership of land, the different uses of land.

"It gives us a complete picture as to what we have to do from the planning point to view," he said.

The board's planning committee chairman said that the basic concept of planning is not to arrest development but to ensure that it is carried out in an orderly and intelligent manner. "Unless we hit the problem within the next five years we shall have a hell of a mess, much of the public resistance to land use control is due to misunderstanding of the objectives, lack of foresight and, unfortunately, deliberate misleading by self-seeking landowners and professional developers.

"The time has come when landowners must be made aware that they no longer may have the right to develop their land in a manner which ignores the comfort of their neighbors, the preservation of ecology and the future orderly development of the surrounding areas as a whole," Daniels said. The Cowichan Bay director stressed that the regional board only acts in each rural electoral area in accordance with the wishes of the people.

Galiano Crash Victims Treated at Salt Spring

GANGES — Three persons were injured, none of them seriously, Wednesday morning in a two-car collision on Galiano Island about 1½ miles south of Montague Harbor.

The three were all released after treatment at Lady Minto Hospital on Salt Spring Island where they were taken by local pleasure boats after the accident.

RCMP said Page was alone in one car when it was in collision with another driven by Mrs. Bedford's husband, Allen. Bedford was not injured.

Reid-Meredith Introduces "The Spun Air" Wig

There's almost nothing to it . . . the "almost nothing" is in the cap. Full of holes and full of air and so lightweight that when you wear it you can forget it. All of Reid-Meredith's caps are lightweight. But "The Spun Air" is carried to the lightest extreme. In a process that's something like dropping stitches in crocheting, but a lot more scientific, the Reid-Meredith people came up with these spun knit bands held together by gossamer threads. (The diagram explains it.) The result is a bantam-weight air-conditioner, right there on top of your head. Cool breezes can blow through it, but your hair can't show through. "The Spun Air" of Dynel, the modacrylic fiber that behaves itself better than your own hair, comes in colors especially blended to look natural (in a range of 16 interesting shades). And, of course, an expert in our Wig Salon will cut and shape it for you. "The Spun Air" comes in two different styles. Each of them really pretty. And really nothing. Easily handled, too. Come in soon . . . try one on.

Mummy's Day

A 47-year-old Tofino man is scheduled to appear in Tofino Provincial Court today to answer a charge of taking a mummy from a rock shelter near here.

The man, Charlie Ehler, is expected to enter his plea on the charge before Judge Myrtle Sexton. He was charged Monday.

The case is the first to be laid under provisions of the 1972 Archaeological and Historical Sites Protection Act which has been on the books for 12 years but was only proclaimed last May.

Section 4b of the act says: "No person or agency shall knowingly destroy, desecrate or alter a burial place or remove from it skeletal remains."

The act provides for a maximum fine of $1,000, six months in jail, or both on conviction.

The mummified female body was discovered two weeks ago by contractor John Stertz in a Surrey house he bought from Ehlers.

New Westminster Coroner Doug Jack had the mummy sent to the Provincial Museum in Victoria. It was to be returned to the Clayoquot Indians at Opitsat.

NDP Candidate Wants Food Price Controls

CAMPBELL RIVER — Comox NDP candidate Karen Sanford Tuesday night pledged to fight skyrocketing food prices on Vancouver Island and outlined a six-point program of price controls at the provincial level.

She told an overflow crowd in the legion hall here that the Bennett government had failed to exercise its responsibility in attempting to curb food prices which she claimed had increased by as much as 300 per cent over the past year.

An NDP government would strive to protect the consumer from a price increases imposed mainly by food chain stores. She then outlined a series of proposals to achieve this end.

- Eliminating wasteful and expensive packaging;
- Accelerate unit pricing;
- Establish a price review board as an alternative to unrestricted price increases and to press the federal government to scrutinize more closely monopoly pricing in foodstuffs;
- Producer and consumer co-ops should be encouraged;
- A consumer education program should be instituted to advise people how to obtain the best possible nutrition within their budgets;
- Island freight rates which contribute substantially to higher food prices on Vancouver Island should be either reduced or subsidized to cut the cost of living for Island residents.

Mrs. Sanford said an NDP government would "commit itself to these goals."

She went on to attack the present government for its failure to live up to its promises of a new north island highway. She said the present road link is dusty, dangerous and provides only limtied public access to northern communities.

"All the government has done is to provide bits and pieces of black top and has left us with a lot of unfulfilled promises and a ferry design (from Kelsey Bay to Beaver Cove) for maximum discomfort."

Referring to a Social Credit campaign advertisement which shows a smooth blacktopped highway and advises voters August 30 not to take a rutted dirt road which turns to the left, Mrs. Sanford told the applauding audience: "The ad should have said the blacktop leads to Kelowna and the other road to Beaver Cove."

Earlier, NDP Leader Dave Barrett attended a luncheon at Powell River which drew 150 supporters at $5 a plate. In a brief address he predicted that premier Bennett would shortly begin a campaign of smear, vilification, and personal attacks on the NDP. But, he said no matter how much money the government spends or how many insults it hurls, the voters will know better than to support a failing government at the polls August 30.

Both in Powell River and Campbell River Barrett gave his audiences the same message: "Tell Mr. Bennett you're fed up by electing a fighting opposition MLA to represent you in Victoria."

Sign Theft Condemned

DUNCAN — "We have had reports that some of the political billboards are being defaced," said John Cannon, president of the Cowichan-Malahat NDP Association.

"The NDP abhors this practice and we have instructed our members and supporters to respect the political signs of other parties as we expect them to respect ours.

"We have had a number of our signs taken away or torn. This practice is an affront to the democratic process," Cannon said.

Tour of Farms

DUNCAN — Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford and Cowichan-Malahat Socred candidate Kay Grouhel will tour the farming community of the Cowichan Valley this afternoon.

They will visit each farm in the valley and be introduced by local farm leaders.

"The agricultural contribution to our economy is a major one," said Mrs. Grouhel," and it is obvious that Island producers are at a distinct disadvantage and we must adopt policies which will improve their competitive position."

Nonsuch Visits Cowichan Bay

DUNCAN — Replica of the Hudson's Bay 17th Century ship Nonsuch will visit Cowichan Bay Monday and Tuesday. She will arrive at the government wharf at about 7 p.m. and will be open for visitors until 9 p.m.

Visitors will again be admitted 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesday. Next ports of call for the Nonsuch will be Brentwood and Sidney.

Gas Pipeline Hearing Ends After 52 Days

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three months of testimony completed an 6,800 pages of evidence compiled, the public inquiry into schemes to pipe natural gas to Vancouver Island closed Tuesday with a verbal battle among counsel for the applicants.

B. V. Massie, counsel for Malaspina Gas Pipelines Ltd., questioned whether B.C. Hydro's application was sincere or if the public utility had simply been trying to stop anybody else from gaining approval for a pipeline.

Massie made the allegation to the Public Utilities Commission which has been set the task of deciding between Hydro, Malaspina and three other applicants as to who shall be awarded a certificate of public convenience and necessity.

He said Hydro could, on its own initiative have begun piping gas to the Island at any time prior to 1971 when the provincial government called for bids on a transmission system serving both the Island and Powell River.

Team's Victory Surprised Coach

DUNCAN—Swimmers from the Cowichan Indian band came first in four of six swimming events at the weekend during the Native Olympiad held at Esquimalt.

In view of this fact this is only the second year Cowichan has had a swimming team, their performance at the province-wide event is even more remarkable, Ray Peters, head instructor for the group, said Monday. "Cowichan's ideal location, by the Cowichan River, was a prime reason so many strong swimmers have emerged from the area," he said.

Taking first place in men's junior, and women's junior, intermediate, and senior relays, the all Indian team had practised long hours swimming against the strong river current, which made them more than prepared for the pool-held events. Peters said many of the team members also work as life guards and swimming instructors on the river.

Although he expected good results from the team, Peters was surprised to defeat the well-established swim teams from other parts of the province, some with over five years swimming experience, and now that he knows Cowichan's potential, is anticipating a clear sweep of the swimming events next year.

Rock Concert Planned

COURTENAY — The Courtenay is seeking permission to tenay is seeking ermission to stage a rock concert here Aug. 27, city council has learned.

The Crisis Centre first asked the Courtenay School Board for permission to stage the concert on the Lake Trail junior secondary school grounds and the school board then asked council how it felt about the proposal.

Council decided it has no objections to the concert noting that lake Trail is situated just outside the city's boundaries.

Although some aldedrmen seemed cool to the proposal generally, Ald. George Cochrane took the other point of view. Cochrane pointed to the success of the drop-in centre in the city this summer and told council the concert should be held "to give the kids a chance to keep proving themselves."

The ultimate decision, however, now rests with the school board, so long as the organizers want to stage it on school property.

Board secretary-treasurer Roy Mills has said the matter is in the hands of the board's properties and transportation committee, "and I haven't heard from them."

Mills said the reason a crisis centre is promoting a rock concert is apparently "a sort of public relations venture." He said centre officials "apparently want to make their services known."

The concert would be free and would probably be restricted to groups from the immediate area, Mills said he was told.

Reclassification Increases Costs

Duncan To Appeal Roads Move

DUNCAN — City council learned Monday night that the provincial highways department intends to reclassify Trunk Road and Government Street as a secondary highway. Now the two thouroughfares are arterial highways paid for by the provincial government and council wants to keep it that way otherwise costs will become shareable between the city and the provincial department of highways.

Council will seek an interview with the highways minister to discuss the matter. The highways department advised Duncan "because these streets no longer form part of the main provincial highway network and the bulk of traffic using the streets is travelling to and, or from points within the city, arterial classification of the route is no longer justified."

Ald. Ken Paskin said it should not be allowed to have "the roads dumped on us." Ald. Hamish Mutter thought the city should first conduct its own traffic counts before presenting any argument and Ald. Allan Kerr suggested the city should at least try to reach a better sharing basis with the highways department.

Mayor Jim Quaife received his council's endorsation of a courteous driver program under which meritorious drivers will receive a special bonus. It will start Sept. 1. Each month a driver will be selected by a special committee.

The bonus will be a letter, tickets for a restaurant or a theatre. The RCMP will conduct the program. Quaife said "this program will be unique in B.C. and may be even in Canada."

In other business council: learned that during July social assistance in the city amounted to $13,815; decided to arrange a joint meeting with North Cowichan to hear the swimming pool report; was advised that during the past month 78,791,700 gallons of water were pumped for the city's water system which is an incrdase of 7,233,700 gallons over the same month last year, and referred to the streets committee a request for better traffic controls at Craig and Government streets.

Island Entries Beautification Semi-Finalists

Three judges in the British Columbia-wide Park and Tilford business beautification contest are examining seven Vancouver Island entries which have reached the semi-final of the contest.

After judges have examined entrants in seven areas of the province regional finalists will be announced at the end of the month.

The grand winner will be announced at a ceremony Sept. 21 in Vancouver.

Semi-finalists on Vancouver Island are Nootka Court and Paul's Crown Restaurant, both in Victoria, Tyee Plaza, and Heritage Park Pavilion, Campbell River; Courtenay Civic Centre Square, Courtenay; The Cowichan Valley Forest Museum, Duncan and McDonald and Sons Ltd., Port Alberni.

Judges for the Vancouver Island Region of the contest were at work Tuesday and included J. W. Kerr, president of the Professional Engineers Association of B.C.; Doris Morris, president of the B.C. Council of Garden Clubs and Maurice Power, president of the B.C. Nursery Trades Association.

Campbell River Weekly Wins National Award

MONTREAL (CP) — A Vancouver Island weekly newspaper has been chosen best all-round publication for 1971 in its circulation category by the Canadian Community Newspaper Association, it was announced Tuesday.

The Campbell River Courier, in its 3,000 to 6,000 circulation category was one of two British Columbia weeklies to win the national award.

The second newspaper was the Squamish-Howe Sound Times in the 1,000 to 2,000 category.

Brampton-Bramalea, Ont., Guardian was judged top weekly among CCNA members with a circulation of more than 6,000. A second Ontario weekly, the Gananoque Reporter won in the 2,000 to 3,000 class.

In the circulation category of 1,000 and under, the Nanton, Alta., News will receive the top award when prizes are distributed at the CCNA's annual banquet in Montreal Saturday.

2, 4-D Use Angers Malahat Area Resident

Spraying 'Idiotic, Unnecessary'

Spraying by B.C. Hydro crews near the Spectacle Lake Provincial Park on the Malahat was termed "idiotic and unnecessary" Tuesday by a resident in the area.

"You should take a walk up there.

"But don't stay too long or you'll be liable to die," Arthur Hall, owner of Hall's Marina told the Colonist by telephone Tuesday.

Hall said the spray, 2, 4-D, gave off a sickly smell and had been used on spirea bush cover which in no way would interfere with Hydro power lines in the area.

Three years ago, Hall complained about Hydro crews spraying along the main power line in the area, which eventually killed off most of the quail in the area and also some deer.

This time the Hydro spraying is on the old power line to Bamberton, which crosses the road to Spectacle Lake in two places.

Hall said the Hydro sprayers were in the area about three weeks ago.

He hopes to spur action to stop further "indiscriminate" spraying with 2, 4-D through public reaction.

B.C. Hydro has three spraying crews working throughout Vancouver Island.

According to wildlife biologist Rory Finnegan of the provincial fish and wildlife branch, the spraying has to be approved by the interdepartmental committee on pesticides.

Finnegan said Tuesday spot applications had been cleared by the committee for areas where Hydro considered spraying vital and urgent for the safety of its men, power lines and the public.

Workemen might have to work on power lines at any time and the immediate area had to be kept clear of trees and bush which might endanger the workmen.

He added that B.C. Hydro was aware of the concern of wildlife biologists that animals could be killed because of the spraying projects.

Three years ago the quail and deer ate foliage which had chemically changed because of the spraying. Poisonous ragwort had built up more sugar because of the spray and had become attractive to wildlife.

Finnegan said he had heard of no reports of wildlife dying because of the recent spray near Spectacle Lake and he attributed this to more careful use of the pesticide by Hydro crews.

The trouble three years ago had been caused by a poor spraying job by the crews.

"The whole thing was an exercise in futility then but techniques have changed and we don't expect any trouble this time," he said.

B.C. Hydro's transmission supervisor for the Island, Barry Hall said from his Nanaimo office Tuesday that the Spectacle Lake spraying was just one area of the overall program.

Trouble was being had in many areas with alder trees which grew five to eight feet a year and interfered with transmission lines.

He was not aware of any problems caused by spraying near Spectacle Lake.

Meanwhile in Richmond, the municipal council has decided to investigate the use of chemical herbicides by B.C. Hydro after a woman claimed plants had been destroyed on her property through Hydro spraying near her house.

A University of British Columbia botanist, who took samples of damaged plants from Ruby Mundreon's property, said herbicides were involved. Hydro officers blamed aphids and the heat for the damage.

Strike Cramps Manor Style

But a strike by the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters isn't expected to hamper the operation of the manor. Its only effect may be to keep a handful of tradesmen from providing the finishing touches to work that was nearing completion.

John Schibli, president of the carpenters' local, said his union was "very reluctant" to picket the manor. "But it is the only course open to us at this point. And we are doing it in the interest of our members."

Picket Front

He said the carpenters were picketing only the front of the building so that the regular staff could enter from the other side and continue its normal work.

But he expected that a number of other tradesmen, as well as the carpenters, would stay off the premises altogether.

The dispute involves Oak Bay Manor and about six carpenters. The men had gone directly onto the Oak Bay Manor payroll several months ago after a sub-contractor ran into financial difficulties, Schibli said.

He said the manor accepted terms of the old collective agreement but has failed to switch to the new construction industry contract which went into effect recently on a province-wide basis after a lengthy shutdown.

Boost Coming

Schibli said there had been verbal commitment to do so, but that he had been unsuccessful, in numerous attempts to meet with key personnel, including Gordon McKee of Vancouver, vice-president of Oak Bay Manor Ltd.

The old contract picked up by the manor expired April 30, Schibli said. He said the first phase of the new contract would boost the men's wages from $6.14 an hour to $6.54. They were also due retroactive pay.

Schibli said 72-hour strike notiee was served Friday at noon but had brought no response from the company.

Boxing Club Earns Title

Jim Walshaw scored six goals for the Boxers, who produced a nine-goal burst in the final period after leading, 5-3, at the end of the first period and 10-4 after the second.

Boxing Club now plays North Shore Olympics of North Vancouver in a two-game, total-goal Pacific Coast Senior "C" final in Victoria this weekend. Location and times are still to be decided.

Condition Fair

Fraser Williams of 3785 Bellgrave, Saanich, was in fair condition Monday night in Victoria General Hospital with severe injuries to his left foot received earlier in the day in an industrial accident, hospital authorities reported.

Langford fire department officials said Williams was involved in an accident with a fork lift at Plumper Bay Sawmills Ltd., Admirals Road in View Royal. Doctors were attempting to save his foot Monday night.

Reconstruction At Intersection

The intersection of Craigflower and Tillicum in Esquimalt will be under reconstruction and closed to traffic until 5 p.m. Friday, according to the highways department.

Bennett Promises Local Rally:

Late Night Ferry Will Get Trial Now

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

A late night ferry will be launched on a service between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen on a trial basis before the Aug. 30 provincial election, Premier Bennett told an overflow crowd of 850 to 900 at Victoria high school Tuesday.

Smiling broadly and gesturing with both hands, he appeared to welcome the shouts of the hecklers at first and provided some telling punch lines of his own. But later, his trademark smile shrank and his replies lost much of their edge.

When it was all over he was escorted quickly through a heavy rain by public relations man Bill Clancey and others to a waiting limousine, where he declined to answer questions from reporters about the ferry service.

Bennett asked the reporters to see him today.

"He was soaking wet," said Clancey of the premier, who was perspiring after his address on behalf of Social Credit candidates in the Greater Victoria ridings. "We didn't want him getting cold in that rain."

During his speech, which also drew noisy bursts of approval from his supporters, Bennett offered a piece of cheery news for old-age pensioners.

Referring to his Kelowna Charter, he said the increase to the pension supplement would bring the pension and supplements to "considerably more" than $200 a month. He offered no definite figure.

He said it was obvious 99 per cent of the people at the meeting were friends and 1 per cent, enemies.

Convicts Capture Airport, Jetliner

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Heavily-armed leftist guerrillas and escaped convicts seized a small Argentine airport Tuesday night and 10 of them hijacked a jetliner to this Chilean capital, police reported.

The hijackers took over the plane at Trelew, a small city in south central Argentina. After stopping for fuel at Puerto Montt just across the Chilean border, they ordered the pilot to Santiago, where the plane landed shortly after 8 p.m. PDT. It carried 90 passengers and six crew members.

One person was shot dead and several persons were wounded in a breakout from Rawson penal colony near Trelew that preceded the hijacking.

Troops and police surrounded the Trelew airport terminal, where 19 terrorists and convicts were reported holding eight airline employees hostage. The police also

U.K. Crisis Continues

Dockers Move on Small Ports

LONDON (Reuter) — Hundreds of striking dockworkers moved out of London Tuesday to reinforce picket lines at small ports which have been defying the 19-day-old national stoppage.

The dockers set off in busloads in the early-morning hours, their destinations being kept secret until the last moment.

Two of their main targets turned out to be Colchester and Richborough, both a few hours' drive from London.

The picketing operation was mounted at a time when hopes were rising that the strike, which has closed all the country's major ports and reduced its trade to a trickle, might end this weekend.

The crucial decision will be made today at a docks delegation conference, the only body empowered to order a return to work.

The conference was called by Jack Jones, leader of the Transport and General Workers' Union, after lengthy bargaining with port employers.

The strikers are demanding that registered longshoremen paid at the regular waterfront rate should be hired in the growing number of container packing depots which now perform much of the work that used to be done on the dockside.

Also, they want to stop the smaller ports, like Colchester, taking on non-registered dockers at lower pay rates. These non-registered dockers are defying the strike.

Container firms have been reluctant to replace their own hands with higher priced labor from the docks. But Jones secured from port employers an agreement which he hopes will gain acceptance from the strikers.

McLeod Heads Church

SASKATOON (CP) — Rev. Dr. Bruce McLeod of Toronto, who called for a new responsiveness and an end to rigid structure, was elected moderator of the United Church of Canada Tuesday night.

McLeod, 43, was the youngest of the four candidates for the office, top post in Canada's largest Protestant denomination.

He was elected on the fourth ballot on the first day

Kissinger and Tho Head for Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and the North Vietnamese he has been meeting with secretly in Paris, Le Duc Tho, are heading for South and North Vietnam respectively.

The White House announced Tuesday that Kissinger is flying to Saigon for two days of talks with President Nguyen Van Thieu on the Vietnam war and negotiations for peace.

In Paris, a spokesman for the Viet Cong peace delegation confirmed that Le Duc Tho will leave Wednesday for Hanoi. He acts as special adviser to the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris.

The spokesman, Ly Van Sau, would make no further comment on Tho's trip but observers in Paris immediately connected it with Kissinger's mission and with the future of Thieu.

B.C. Pension Barrett Plan

Retirement at Age 55 Possible, NDP States

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

CAMPBELL RIVER — NDP leader Dave Barrett announced here Tuesday night an NDP government would introduce a voluntary provincial plan paying benefits based on the profits of investments in new B.C. industry.

He told a packed audience of more than 250 in the Legion Hall that the aims of the plan were twofold: to permit B.C. citizens to participate in the development of the province through their own investments and to allow those who wish to retire as early as age 55 to do so.

The proposed B.C. Pension Plan, Barrett said, would be tied to a B.C. Industrial Development Corporation. He said an NDP government would put "tens of millions of dollars" into the corporation initially and would supplement this investment with premiums from the new provincial pension plan.

"The pension plan will be portable within the province enabling participants to carry their contributions from job to job within the province," he said. "And anyone leaving B.C. can withdraw his savings from the plan at prevailing interest rates.

● Unions won't go to court—Tory.—Page 17

Benefits To Increase

"Furthermore, the pension benefits would increase in relation to the profits made by the industrial development corporation. So the more successful the corporation is, the higher the pension payments will be."

The NDP leader said voluntary participation under the plan would be within set limits of a minimum of 3 per cent and a maximum of 6 per cent of the income of any B.C. resident.

"Why shouldn't someone who feels that way be able to retire comfortable at age 55?" Barrett said. "I know a lot of people who would make darn good hippies at 55 because they have the experience to enjoy it."

"Let the young people go to work and not go on the wel-

Nicholson Retiring, Successor Sought

British Columbia may have a new lieutenant-governor before many weeks are out.

B.C. government sources indicated to the Colonist Tuesday that Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, 71, will ask Prime Minister Trudeau to name a successor before his normal term runs out.

Nicholson, however, said that he had "no comment" to make on the matter.

Nicholson was appointed to the office in June, 1968 and the custom in Canada has been a term of five years.

Informants say Nicholson will retire for reasons of health and that consultations between Bennett and Trudeau will soon be arranged to consider Nicholson's successor.

In January, Nicholson collapsed at a dinner party at Government House but was released after a short stay in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

No Crumb for Conservationists

WASHINGTON (CP) — A federal judge gave his go-ahead Tuesday to the controversial trans-Alaska oil pipeline project, acknowledging that the United States supreme court will make the final decision but dismissing all of the legal objections raised by opponents of the $3-billion project.

Judge George Hart, whose district court has been the scene of sporadic legal battles over the pipeline for the last 28 months, gave not a single crumb of comfort to the American and Canadian conservationists in his brief oral judgement.

John Dienelt, one of the lawyers for the pipeline opponents, said they expect to begin the appeal process by next Monday with a motion to the U.S. court of appeal.

Judge Hart declined to issue a temporary order stopping Interior Secretary Rogers Morton from issuing the necessary construction permits until appeals are heard.

Instead, he accepted a pledge from lawyers for the interior department and Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. that "no construction of any kind" will go forward until the appeals are decided. Alyeska also promised to give the conservationists 30 days' notice of any change.

Judge Hart said that since it "can be confidently anticipated that the final decision rests with the supreme court," he would not delay the legal process further by giving detailed findings or reasons for his judgment.

He then announced his decision that:

● The interior department had complied reasonably with all requirements of the U.S. environmental protection law, and

● Various land-use permits awarded to Alyeska for its pipeline are authorized by law.

Anderson Pledges Public Funds To Fight Coast Tanker Route

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public funds would go into the legal battle against a trans-Alaskan oil pipeline and West Coast tanker route if he were to form a provincial government on Aug. 30, British Columbia Liberal leader David Anderson said Tuesday.

At a news conference following his appearance as a witness in a court case in Washington, D.C., regarding the pipeline, Anderson said the provincial government, with the consent of the legislature, could hire lawyers to represent B.C. interests in the suit.

"It's incredible to me that
